Deeply Touched By Reception

King George and His Beautiful
Queen Feel at Home in Victoria

By BRUCE HUTCHISON
In this place which bears his great grandmother's name and which made the Pacific Coast a part of his Empire, King George felt at home today, in his own words "deeply touched."

An islander himself, the heir of Britain's "rough island story" the King and his Queen landed last night on another island "set in the silver sea," passing beacon fires like those that have blazed for other kings on England's shores and into a harbor of lights and flowers like something torn out of a fairy story.

Today when the King and Queen awoke at Government House it was to look out upon a sunny English garden, where roses bloomed and yellow broom blossoms waved among familiar oaks, and where people of English breed poured out to give them just such a welcome as they would receive at home.

CHAPTER OF HISTORY

As the King and Queen stood on the broad stone steps of the Parliament Buildings they looked out on the massed population of the capital but on more than that, on a great chapter in the history of their Empire, on one of the key spots on the earth's surface where that Empire was made.

Across the harbor yonder, young James Douglas landed from his little ship to found Fort Camosun and claim this island and this Coast for the Queen of England. Behind these stone buildings, in the little wooden houses that were called the Bird Cages, the legislators of the crown colony of British Columbia decided by narrow vote to enter Canada rather than the United States. Here Canada was completed, and the wholesome sea brought to her western gates.

And though the King may not have known it, within these buildings the people of British Columbia reasserted the ancient rights of a free people under a democratic crown which had been asserted first against another king at Marston Moor, at Naseby and Whitehall. Here in stout Joe Martin's time British Columbia's legislators had walked out on a Lieutenant-Governor who refused to accept their advice and the Governor was dismissed.

The democracy of the throne, tested then and not found wanting, was proved again today. There was a certain informality about the entire function, an intimate touch of friendliness impossible in larger places.

Seeing these people and looking back on his passage across Canada, the King was moved to deliver a reply to the Empire and the world, for he had learned, he said, "to understand the qualities of the Canadian people." And having crossed from Atlantic to Pacific he predicted that "this country will become a thoroughfare between two hemispheres."

Then he chose Victoria, the western terminus of his tour, to make an appeal to the world for friendship instead of struggle. "Some day," he said, speaking to the state luncheon gathering in the Empress Hotel, "the people of the world will come to realize that prosperity lies in co-operation and not in conflict." These words he spoke in a quiet, earnest voice, which seemed to indicate the great issues of war and peace of which he knows as well as any man alive.

ELOQUENT WELCOME

At the Parliament Buildings the King and Queen received from Premier Pattullo, British Columbia's official message of welcome, but far more eloquent of British Columbia's feelings, closer to its history, was the unofficial welcome of the people.

All British Columbia could not be here but it had sent its leading men from every corner of the province, and in the Parliament Buildings, where they felt at home, they turned it into something like a family party.

Meanwhile Victoria had spread itself along miles of streets for a look at the King in his blue Admiral's uniform, at the Queen in a new costume of pale lilac color with huge straw hat.

Most Victoria people are of British stock. To them the sight of the King and Queen was rich with memories and family tradition. This sense of kinship, this subconscious pride of all Victorians in the English character of their city welled up in a welcome peculiarly Victorian.

Under the towering archway of the Parliament Buildings main entrance all the familiar faces of British Columbia were gathered together, awaiting the King—Premier Pattullo in top hat and morning coat and with a large white rose in his buttonhole, Mrs. Pattullo and their little golden-haired granddaughters, Anne and Beth Collison. With them John Hart, Gordon Wismer, George Pearson, Frank MacPherson, Bill Asselstine, George Weir, Dr. MacDonald, Wells Gray—ministers of the crown in top hats to meet the King, but to Victorians, just fellow-citizens.

Before them the lawns were dark with people and every moment more of them poured off the Seattle boat—Americans who had come to see the Royal couple whom they have been reading about these last two weeks.

Northward the Causeway was packed on all sides. Behind these crowds towered the Empress Hotel gay with banners and bunting and for a background white ships lay in the harbor, all their signal flags fluttering. And all around, framing the picture, were billows of green foliage and huge red splashes of hawthorn bloom. British Columbia was meeting the King in a garden.

Presently we could see the flags begin to flutter along Government Street and a cheer rolled southward over the Causeway. Along the broad street came a motor cycle escort from the Princess Pats in scarlet tunics, red spots against the dark crowd, and then a larger cheer as the little yellow and red flag—the Royal Standard—was seen on a moroon-colored car.

But Victoria does not cheer with the abandon of some cities. Its character is reserved. Its cheers were rather of the hip, hip, hooray sort—three of them and a tiger in the British style, then pauses of respectful silence. But a thundering roar rose as the Royal car reached the Parliament Buildings driveway. The Victorians waved their hats.

At the bottom of the steps on a red carpet Premier Pattullo waited with his wife beside him. As the King and Queen alighted from her car the Premier and Mrs. Pattullo shook them by the hand. A guard of honor from Victoria's own regiment, the famous Fifth Regiment, in black uniform and white helmet, presented arms and the King stood stiffly at attention to take the salute while the band played the National Anthem.

Everyone had a good chance then to see the Queen's new costume which became instantly the centre of interest.

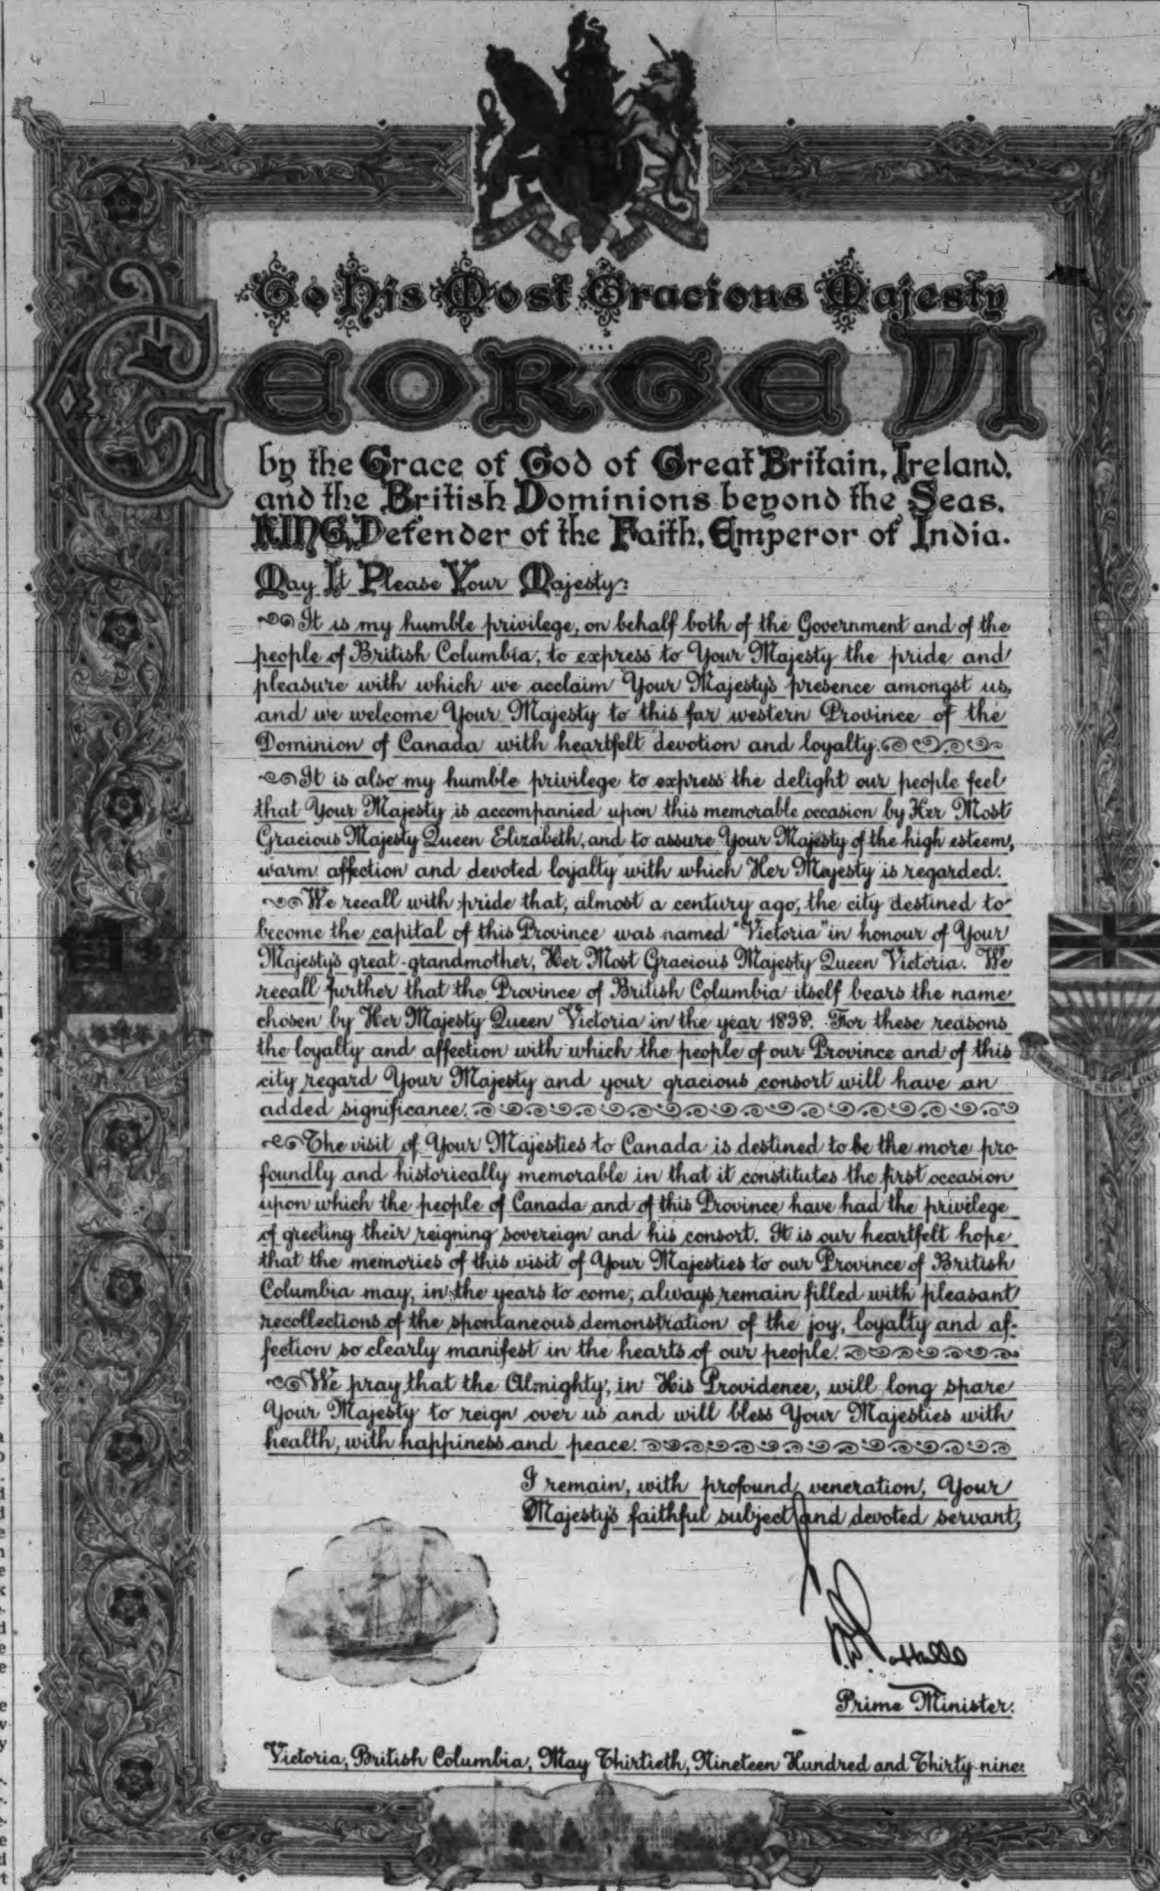

A lady reporter who understands such things told this correspondent, who thinks the description fairly accurate, that the Queen wore an orchid-colored ensemble of silk with a short jacket, and her skirts, perhaps the beginning of a new style, were below her ankles, almost touching the ground. Her hat of the same color was of straw, the wide brim turned up with trimmings of lace. It had a dashing look, rather like a sombrero. As usual, the Queen's smile was the most attractive sight in the whole spectacle. The King wore the blue uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet.

PRESENTATION OF ADDRESS

As the King briskly inspected the Guard of Honor the Queen stood chatting with Mr. and Mrs. Pattullo and with Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Hamber. The King rejoined them and Mr. Pattullo escorted him up the steps to the stone platform where the cabinet and their wives were gathered.

Here, standing in front of a microphone, but not close enough for his voice to register in the amplifiers, Mr. Pattullo held the government's address of welcome in his hands—a piece of vellum bound in blue leather nearly two feet square. Adjusting his familiar eyeglasses, the Premier read the address in a voice which most British Columbians could recognize. The King and Queen listened intently, too. The crowd, listened intently too. The crowd, seeing their first plain view of the King, burst into cheers.

When he had finished Mr. Pattullo handed the blue bound address to the King, who began to roll it up, but handed it instead to one of his aides. The King's reply was handed to the Premier in written form. His Majesty (Turn to Page 4, Col. 6)

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S ADDRESS OF WELCOME—Above is a facsimile of the address read and presented to Their Majesties outside the Legislative Buildings this morning by Premier T. D. Pattullo. The design is built around the Royal Arms and embodies the Arms of Canada and of British Columbia. The scheme ornamentation is the Renaissance in which is featured the symbolic Rose, Thistle and Shamrock. Rich lustre was imparted to the illuminated scroll by the use of real gold color. The address is bound in handsomely tooled Royal blue leather.

100,000 Cheer Along 13-mile Route

King George and Queen Elizabeth smiled and waved to 100,000 people gathered along 13 miles of streets this morning, and in return were shown a cross-section of the life of Canada's western-most capital and its three suburban municipalities.

School children everywhere yelled their greeting in a wave of cheering that could be heard a full block before the Royal car arrived and still echoed when the last of the long string of cars in the procession had passed.

In fact it was the children's day. Only for them and for invalids and cripples lined up outside the Jubilee Hospital did the Royal car slow to a crawl.

The Royal route was chosen deliberately to show Their Majesties the ordinary streets and ordinary homes of the city and its suburbs. Show places were avoided.

From Government House the procession climbed Joan Crescent and at once was among the school children, hundreds of them lined up on either side near Victoria College, waving Union Jacks and cheering at the tops of their high-pitched voices.

The same cheers and the same flag waving accompanied Their Majesties as they made the sharp turn from Fort Street into Yates Street and started down the long wide-hill into the city's shopping district. Here the flags made a solid wall on the left side—the side the King was riding—and many of the little girls had decked their hair with flowers.

Further down Yates Street the procession took on the formality befitting the centre of a city. The veterans who had lined the start of the route gave way to close ranks of armed men—gunners, Highlanders, sailors—the bayonets of their presented arms glinting in the sunlight.

Hotel windows were crowded, and low roofs gave vantage points to scores of spectators avoiding the crush on the sidewalks.

Then the Royal car was outside the City Hall, with a massed male choir singing God Save the King and the crowd joining in a wave of sound.

While the brief civic ceremony was going on inside the building the crowds stayed still, listening to a description of the event over loudspeakers.

A few moments and Their Majesties were on the City Hall steps, the choirs singing O Canada and two pipers skirling out the wistful song of farewell, "Will Ye No Come Back Again?"

As the Royal car pulled away from the curb and swung down Cormorant Street a great cheer went up, rolling before it to the corner of Government Street.

There Their Majesties were greeted with one of the most colorful of all the scenes of their route. Across the end of Cormorant 13 Chinese girls in the traditional dress of their ancestors were lined up on a dais. Above their heads blue letters spelled out "The Chinese Community Greets Their Majesties" and underneath "Long Live the King."

Then along Government Street the kilts and pipes of the two battalions of the Canadian Scottish Regiment, and after them the Garrison Artillery and the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

The Royal car was away 20 minutes early from the impressive ceremonial at the Parliament Buildings, rolling along Belleville to Douglas Street, where it was greeted by the music of bells from St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Prosperity of World Lies in Co-operation,
British Monarch Declares at Royal Luncheon

King George, after traveling the breadth of Canada with his beautiful consort, Queen Elizabeth today thanked the Canadian people for their warm welcome in a heartfelt message that was broadcast throughout the Empire.

Speaking before 250 state luncheon guests at the Empress Hotel, the King paid compliment to Canada and its people.

"To travel through so grand a country is a privilege to any man," he said, "but to travel through it to the accompaniment of such an overwhelming testimony of goodwill, from young and old alike, is an experience that has, I believe, been granted to few people."

"We are deeply grateful for it; we shall never forget it; and the inspiration it has given us will hearten and encourage us for the rest of our lives."

In a speech that literally rang around the world, the King gave his impressions of the vastness of Canada, of its great resources and its far spaces as yet untouched but to be developed by generations to come.

And in a note of hopes for peace that "some day the peoples of the world will come to realize that prosperity lies in co-operation, and not in conflict, he saw for Canada a great destiny, the furthering of friendly relations between the east and the west."

His Majesty's address today, made at the conclusion of the luncheon tendered by the provincial government, was an historic event.

It was the King of Canada telling, for the first time the story of Canada as he found it. His words contained the feeling of a monarch who sincerely appreciated the enormous tribute paid by his people.

To those attending the luncheon it was a solemn occasion. They sat tense listening to every word.

The King spoke deliberately, weighing each word.

THE SPEECH
Following is the complete text of his address:

The Queen and I have crossed Canada from east to west, from ocean to ocean, and stand now on the shores of the Pacific.

Your kind words, Mr. Premier, have set the seal on the wonderful welcome that has been given to us at every stage of our long westward journey.

I thank you for them; and here, at Canada's western gateway, I thank all those thousands of Canadians whom we have seen since we landed at Quebec, for the loyalty and affection that they have offered so generously to us both.

To travel through so grand a country is a privilege to any man, but to travel through it to the accompaniment of such an overwhelming testimony of goodwill, from young and old alike, is an experience that has, I believe, been granted to few people in this world.

We are deeply grateful for it; we shall never forget it, and the inspiration it has given us will hearten and encourage us for the rest of our lives.

In the course of this journey I have seen the old settled parts of the Dominion which have a long history behind them, and I have seen the newer parts, of which the first settlement is still within the memory of living man. When I remember that here I am as far from Ottawa as Ottawa is from London, I realize something of the vastness of Canada. When I saw the broad plains, changed by the pioneers to the uses of man, and the mighty mountain ranges through which they cut their roads, I began to understand the qualities of the Canadian people.

For most of you, the present task must be the development of the heritage already secured by those who have gone before. Nevertheless, in this vast land, you have also still before you the rewards of pioneering and the prizes of exploration. You have only touched the fringes of the great north. Once those northern wilds were considered of little value, except as the home of fur-bearing animals. Now they are being surveyed and mapped and settled so far as settlement is possible. Valuable mines are being worked right up to the Arctic Circle. There, in the north, is a field of enterprise for youth which it will take generations to exhaust. I could only wish that it had been possible for me to make a trip into that region which holds so much of Canada's future.

Here, on the shores of the Pacific, I can realize the position which Canada occupies. Her Atlantic windows look to Europe, her Pacific windows to Asia and the Far East. As science reduces the barriers of space, this country will become a thoroughfare between two hemispheres. Some day the peoples of the world will come to realize that prosperity lies in co-operation—and not in conflict. With the dawn of that brighter day, I look to Canada playing an increasingly important part in furthering friendly relations between the east and west. With the widening of her role of international interpretation will come corresponding benefits to mankind.

THE SCENE

The luncheon guests were seated nearly an hour before the King and Queen entered the room to take their seats.

In the great raftered dining-room of the hotel the head table on a raised dais, stretched the length of the west end. Masses of pastel-shade calceolarias, with ferns and palms formed the background.

Delicately-shaded roses in low silver bowls adrip with maiden-hair fern were arranged down the length of the Royal table, so that the King and Queen were visible from every angle in the room.

Sugar bowls of soft rainbow hues filled with sugared blossoms and fruits and small cakes were interspersed with the bowls of flowers.

Set at right angles to the head table the 10 guest tables were laid to the eastern end of the dining-room. The centre tables were decorated with snapdragons in pale shades. Those on the sides had pink carnations in silver holders.

Looking down from the walls of the stately dining-room, which made a sight never witnessed there before, were the portraits in oils of governors-general since Confederation, the King's own representatives and their wives.

Fifteen places were laid at the head table. His Majesty having the central seat. Premier Pattullo, presiding, sat between the King and the Queen.

On the King's right was Mrs. Pattullo, then Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mrs. E. W. Hamber, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Lady Nuburnholme, Senator J. H. King and Lieut.-Col. The Hon. P. W. Lough.

To the left of the Queen were Lieutenant-Governor Hamber, Mrs. J. H. King, Most Rev. A. U. de Pencier, Lady Katherine Seymour, and Rt. Hon. the Earl of Eldon.

From behind them at the table Their Majesties could look out over the crowds that milled along the causeway to the picturesque harborfront where they had received such a tumultuous welcome.

The tasty menu served to the King and Queen at the state luncheon today, had breast of pheasant as the main course. It started with a crab cocktail and Thousand Island dressing, followed by essence of tomato madrilene. Mountain troute sautee, and the fish course. With the pheasant was served new peas a la maitre, new potatoes noisettes, with bread sauce in the English way and bread crumbs buttered. Vancouver Island asparagus was flavored with Hollandaise sauce. The dessert was a Charlotte pratinienne, a frozen cream delicately flavored with cognac. Along with this were dainty cakes served from rainbow-hued sugar baskets.

The dessert was brought into the room on a dramatic set piece sculptured from a solid block of ice representing two beavers at work in the forest. The dessert rested on the stump of a tree. The whole setting was lighted.

School Trust Fund to Commemorate Visit

R. W. Mayhew, M.P., announced today that an English member of Parliament has formed a trust of £5,000 in favor of the Prince of Wales Fairbridge Farm School to commemorate the visit of Their Majesties to Canada and as an appreciation of the interest of the Royal family in the work of the Fairbridge Farm Homes.

Measured just after a two-hour nap some children were found to be as much as half an inch taller than at other times of day, after playing.

Fighting On Border Of Manchukuo

TOKIO (AP)—Japanese-protected Manchukuo has protested to Moscow and to Unga, capital of Soviet-supported Outer Mongolia, against alleged Russian and Mongolian encroachments to which serious skirmishes in recent days were attributed.

A belated communique reported Russian gunboats on the Ussuri River had attacked Manchukuo craft last Saturday near Tunganchen, Manchukuo.

Japanese reports have described infantry skirmishes and aerial encounters along the western border of Manchukuo. Mongols were said to have lost 130 infantrymen and 42 planes.

In the first protest to Unga, the Manchukuo government demanded evacuation of territory allegedly occupied by invaders from Outer Mongolia.

SALT FISH BOARD BILL PASSED

OTTAWA (CP)—Third reading was given the government's salt fish board bill today without further debate.

The plan, discussed at length yesterday, calls for setting up a salt fish board with advisory committees to improve processing and marketing of dry salt fish in the maritimes and bonusing to the extent of $800,000.

King Presents Navy Colors

Thousands See History Made in Beacon Hill Park

For the first time in the history of the British Empire, outside Great Britain, a ruling British Sovereign presented his Colors to a naval command when King George VI made the presentation to the western command of the Royal Canadian Navy in Beacon Hill Park this afternoon.

Under clear skies and bright sunshine, with the Olympic Mountains of Washington in the background, the ceremony was one of the most memorable of the Royal Tour and attracted thousands of people who thronged every available inch of space in the park.

As the King arrived at the Royal Dais among the shrubbery on Douglas Street the Royal Standard was broken and the entire complement of men, including the color party, color guard, color-escort and naval band, gave the Royal salute.

The color party, in command of Lieutenant J. C. Hibbard moved forward and halted in front of the piled drums on which the Color was placed in its case. As the party halted Lieut. Hibbard knelt to await the presentation.

Captain V. G. Brodeur, senior naval officer of the British Columbia Coast, then uncased the Color as the band played "Rule Britannia." The Color was then passed to His Majesty who placed its staff in the Color belt girded on Lieut. Hibbard.

Having received the Colors, Lieut. Hibbard rejoined the Color Party and the Royal Salute was repeated, the Color being dipped at the salute.

The Colors were marched into the ranks of the Color Guard, commanded by Lieut. Commander E. P. Tisdall, R.C.N., at the slow march as the band played the National Anthem.

Having completed this the Color Guard and Escort Company, the latter commanded by Lieut. Commander H. F. Pullen, R.C.N., moved off to position for the march past.

While this was being done His Majesty crossed Douglas Street to the saluting base at the corner of Beacon Street and the parade marched past.

Following the presentation the Colors were marched through the city and Esquimalt back to the Naval Barracks with drums beating, colors flying and bayonets fixed.

On arrival at the barracks the Colors received a Royal Salute and were marched out and trooped at the slow march down the front ranks of the Color Guard and Color Escort.

The Color is a symbol of the Sovereign and when paraded, is accorded the same marks of respect as he would be given if His Majesty were present. It is a White Ensign of silk, with a crown and Royal Cypher superimposed and with blue and gold tassels.

King's Colors are held by eight commands of the Royal Navy, two of the Royal Canadian Navy, two in the Royal Australian Navy and one in the New Zealand Division of the Royal Navy.

The Colors may not be paraded on board ship or on foreign territory and on all occasions when moved a guard must be present and a ceremony observed.

Children Will Bid Royal Pair Farewell

Arrangements were announced today by Alderman W. H. Davies, chairman of the City Council celebration committee, for 3,000 children to give a loyal and rousing farewell to their Majesties at Ogden Point docks tomorrow morning.

Each bearing a small Union Jack, the children will parade to Ogden Point. As the vessel bearing their Majesties leaves the dock, the children will sing O Canada and God Save the King.

Parliamentarians Presented

Brilliant Scene at Buildings; King Chats Briefly With V.C.

Walls have ears, the adage runs. But if walls could speak countless generations of British Columbians still unborn would be destined to thrill to the story of the unparalleled scene of splendor enacted within the Parliament Buildings this morning when, for the first time in the history of this magnificent pile, a King and Queen honored it by their presence to receive the members of the government and the Speaker of the Assembly and their wives.

Their Majesties entered the Legislative Chamber, accompanied by Premier and Mrs. Pattullo, Lieut.-Col. H. M. Urquhart, honorary A.D.C. to the King, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Hamber, the Earl of Eldon, the Earl of Airli, Mr. A. White, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Commander Abel-Smith, Lieut.-Col. F. Lascelles, Surgeon-Captain the Hon. Piers-Legh and Capt. M. Adeane.

QUEEN IN ORCHID

The King was in the undress uniform of an admiral, and the Queen was a picture in a formal gown of orchid crepe, braided in self-color on the left panel of the floor-length skirt, the braiding repeated on the front of the bodice and on the short puffed sleeves and the edge of the brief coatee. She wore a large off-the-face hat of orchid felt, trimmed on the crown with the self-braiding, and her shoulder corsage was of delicate orchids to tone with her gown, clasped with a diamond and emerald brooch. A double rope of pearls with a diamond-clasp completed the regal toilette and Her Majesty carried the bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley presented by little Anne Collison, granddaughter of the Premier, before the Royal Party entered the building.

Lt.-Col. Maurice W. Turner, honorary A.D.C. to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, announced the presentations and Premier Pattullo made the formal presentation to their Majesties, who stood before the Speaker's dais.

The Lady Nunburnholme, lady-in-waiting to the Queen, was in a tailored black ensemble with a long, wide, upturned front and veiled in white-dotted veiling, and the Lady Katherine Seymour, lady-in-waiting, was in a blue-grey tailored ensemble, with a grey tailored hat.

CHATS TO V.C.

About 120 were formally presented to their Majesties. The King chatted briefly to Lieut. Commander R. Bourke, V.C., D.S.O., asking about his war service.

Evidence of their Majesties' kindly consideration was forthcoming when after the first few presentations were over, the Queen graciously asked Mrs. Pattullo, whose health does not permit her to stand for any length of time, to take a seat near the dais.

CURTSEYS VARIED

Curtseys varied noticeably, some of the ladies making a deep obeisance, others, hampered by a little nervousness, bowing slightly. But the King and Queen retained the warm smile for everyone which has endeared them to the hearts of all who have been privileged to meet their Majesties.

FLORAL SETTING

The Legislative chamber lost its customary sober mien and took on a gala appearance for the historic occasion. All the seats which during the sessions are occupied by members and ministers were removed. In front of the Speaker's dais were placed the two specially-constructed carved oak and blue leather chairs, with their accompanying footstools. Above them, hanging from the press gallery, were dark blue velvet hangings, fringed with silver, one being inscribed "GR" and the other "ER."

On each side of the dais were banked blue and mauve hydrangeas, deep gold calceolarias and maidenhair ferns, against tall standards filled with blue iris, pink peonies, pink Mayflower, pyrethrum and antirrhinums. A similar bank of flowers was arranged at the other end of the chamber, just within the main entrance, and around the walls standard baskets of the similar blooms, interspersed with palms and ferns, added to the attractive setting.

according to old custom, did not read it.

All this time little Anne and Beth Collison, the Premier's grandchildren, had been waiting nervously, looking with their golden hair and round pink faces exactly like cherubs in an old painting. Now the Premier, without trace of stiffness, as if he were introducing them to a friend, brought Anne and Beth forward, Anne with a big bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley clutched in her hand.

These she handed to the Queen, who leaned over, smiling to accept them and to speak to the child. Beth, the younger of the two, wearing an identical beige colored coat, stood beside her sister apparently unafraid of the smiling lady in the lilac-colored dress. Both children beamed proudly as the King and Queen greeted them.

The Premier's daughter, Mrs. Clifford Collison, mother of Anne and Beth, was also presented, and then the King and Queen walked up the long steps with the Premier and Mrs. Pattullo and the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Hamber to the Legislative Chamber.

Here between banks of flowers higher than themselves, the King and Queen received the members of the Legislature who had come from the ends of the province, from offices, stores, woods, railway locomotives and ferries to represent all British Columbia.

Many stirring memories has this marble chamber with its glistening yellow lights, and some of them are gay and some of them are sad, and here some of British Columbia's great men have lain in their coffins. But they have never seen anything more simple and friendly and natural than the slight figure of the King in his blue uniform, and the happy Queen shaking hands with the plain men who make the laws of British Columbia.

You felt, without getting sentimental about it, that all the work of legislation in this place from the earliest times, the long effort to make democracy work under the British system, was crowned and given a meaning in this brief little ceremony. All the acts of this Legislature are taken in the name of a King across the sea, following exactly the practices of the Mother of Parliaments. And here for the first time was the King himself receiving the legislators who have made laws in his name at the outer bounds of his Empire.

Again as the King and Queen left the chamber and appeared on the stone steps the crowd burst into cheers. Their Majesties shook hands with the Premier and Mrs. Pattullo, saying goodbye, and getting into their car drove along the packed streets. Their drive covered 15 miles along the tree-lined avenues of Victoria, Esquimalt, Saanich and Oak Bay, and brought them back at 12:20 to the dot to the Empress Hotel where they rested in a luxurious suite before the luncheon in the hotel dining-room.

Amid a beautiful floral setting in the Empress Hotel rotunda today 54 persons were presented to their Majesties.

As they arrived at the Empress Hotel after their 15-mile drive around the city, the King and Queen were greeted on the steps by J. K. Hodges, the manager, who escorted them up to the Royal suite on the third floor.

There the Royal Couple rested until a few minutes before 1. Then they descended to the lobby and took up positions in the centre of the rotunda, with their backs to the broad front windows.

A mass of purple iris was banked on the east side. In front of these the guests passed to be presented to their Majesties. The judiciary, church officers and other officials were presented and then passed into the dining-room to take their seats.

VICTORIANS WERE EARLY RISERS

First Spectators Were Camping Outside Parliament Buildings at 6

Victorians arose at an early hour this morning to greet the King and Queen.

First honors, however, went to the folks from up-island. By 5.30 the first cars from north of Victoria were pouring into the city and their occupants had the pick of vantage points along the route of the procession.

By 6 people were sitting outside the Parliament Buildings, the City Hall and the Empress Hotel, some on small chairs, others on the curb. Others had blankets and small cushions; most of them carried something to eat.

Many of the womenfolk had their knitting; a number passed the time reading books. But all were light-hearted and happy and minded not at all the four or five hours' wait. They had a good view of Their Majesties eventually and it was worth it all.

King Receives City Address

Artistic Message of Loyalty and Affection

Decorated with the symbolic west coast totem pole design, Victoria's official greeting and expression of loyalty to the King was presented to His Majesty in person by Mayor Andrew McGavin at the City Council ceremony in the City Hall today.

Perhaps one of the most distinctive messages that have been handed to the King on his current tour, the address has as its left border a colored Indian totem, bearing the legendary characters carved before the doorways of tribal chiefs.

In artistic lettering, the address reads:

"TO HIS MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY GEORGE VI
 "By the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

"May it please your Majesty:
 "As the representatives of the City of Victoria, the Capital City of British Columbia, we humbly beg to tender to Your Majesty the loyal greetings of the citizens and a sincere and heartfelt welcome to our city.

"Our pride and our pleasure on this occasion is enhanced by the presence of our Queen and our greetings and our welcome go out to Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, whose charm and graciousness has won the hearts of your people.
 "We are grateful for this opportunity to show our allegiance to Your Majesty and are proud in the knowledge that this is the first occasion our Reigning Monarch has so honored our city.

"Our loyalty to Your Majesty and to what you represent springs from our hearts and we are indeed happy that it is possible to present to you in person this written assurance of our affection and homage.

"It would seem that the further your people are from the heart of the Empire the more loyal they are to the Throne and the prouder they are of those British institutions which have been handed down through the centuries.

"Many of our citizens claim the Motherland as their place of birth and while loyalty to Canada takes pride of place, nevertheless the ties of affection and kinship for their homeland are still strong and unbroken.

"Your Majesty's devotion to public duties is an inspiration to all your people and the fortitude and courage with which you are meeting the responsibilities and anxieties of this most difficult period in history has won our affection for you as a man and has gained world admiration.

"Your Majesty's happy domestic life makes direct appeal to the hearts of your people and exemplifies all that is best in our national life.

"We humbly suggest that one reason for Your Majesty's success in all your work is that each and every one of your people in his or her own way is praying for your success and we also pray that you will be given health, strength, wisdom and understanding to maintain those high traditions and ideals we all hold so dear.

"We pray that your visit to Canada will assure Your Majesty—if assurance is needed—that you have a very warm corner in the hearts of the Canadian people and that your visit, particularly to our lovely city, will always remain a treasured memory.

"If the good wishes of the people of Victoria count for anything at all—and they do count—then you, Sir, your charming and gracious Wife, your two lovely children will have very long and very happy lives, and, in praying for your future happiness, health and safety, we also pray that your reign over us may be long, prosperous and crowned with the blessing of peace.

"We remain, with the profoundest veneration,
 "Your Majesty's most faithful subjects and devoted servants."

The address is signed by Mayor Andrew McGavin, each member of the City Council and M. F. Hunter, city clerk.

Cheers Out of Dark

King and Queen Drive From Dock Through Fitfully-lit Crowds

A kaleidoscope of gleaming bayonets, packed-crowd faces fitfully lit by street lights, red and white flares reflected in the rain-gleaming roadway—and over and around everything—the roar of voices traveling before them like a tidal wave—greeted King George and Queen Elizabeth on their first drive through Victoria's streets last night.

The Maroon Royal Car, its hood lowered in spite of the light rain, traveled at a good speed over most of the 13 blocks between the Canadian Pacific dock and Government House, slowing only at the places where the on-lookers were most closely packed.

Ahead of it crackled the exhausts of 10 gleaming silver motorcycles ridden by red-coated officers and men of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. Behind trailed a score of official cars.

Even in that short journey there was variety, ranging from close ranks of armed men lined up along the front of Parliament Square to spaces half a block long in mid-journey where there were only a few people standing sparsely on the boulevards behind the staffs of widely-spaced Boy Scouts and Girl Guides.

The crowd was at its thickest along the three blocks of Belleville Street and, on Rockland Avenue near the Government House gates.

For the first half of the route the faces of the crowd loomed only as a white mass half lit by street lights behind the polished bayonets of rifles held at the present by militiamen standing almost shoulder to shoulder.

Further along red and greenish-white flares spiked to the trunks of trees lit the faces more brightly with an almost ghostly glare.

Then suddenly the Royal car was out of the crowds, passing through a guard of eight saluting provincial policemen into the dark quiet of the Government House drive. Then swiftly into the brightness of the entrance way lights and the skirl of a piper who played Their Majesties up the steps into their Victoria home.

STAGE COLORFUL SHOW TOMORROW

Featuring the Victoria Girls' Drill Team, which, according to American newspapers, "stole the show" in last week-end's Rhododendron Festival in Port Townsend, a Royal Court Pageant will be presented tomorrow evening at 8 in the Willows Park auditorium.

The show, which promises to be a highly-entertaining affair, has been arranged by Warren W. Martin. It will be presided over by "Miss Victoria" (Kay White) who will be known as the Victoria Carnival Queen for the evening.

There will be a colorful variety of entertainment, with the Drill team giving a display of marching drill movements, a Y.M.C.A. tumbling team executing difficult feats on the mats, a combined contortionist and tumbling act and a series of spectacular dance numbers by the Russian Ballet School.

Beacons Blaze Welcome

Huge Fires On Canadian and U.S. Shores Welcome Their Majesties

Beacons along the Canadian and United States coasts of the Gulf of Georgia and the Straits of Juan de Fuca welcomed Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth as they approached Victoria last night.

The beacons extended from 10-Mile Point to Victoria west on the Canadian shore and along the Port Angeles coastline in the United States and formed a picturesque welcome for Their Majesties as they sped along aboard the Royal Ship, Ss. Princess Marguerite, between the Pacific Coast destroyer squadron of the Royal Canadian Navy. In the naval escort were H.M.C.S. Fraser, Ottawa, St. Laurent and Restigouche.

Lit by the Boy Scouts and Sea Scouts the fires piled 20 feet high, were reminiscent of the days of the Spanish Armada when Britons were warned of the approach of enemies by the huge fires along the Dover Coast.

But there was no suggestion of enemies on this occasion. It was an international welcome to a beloved ruling monarch and his charming wife.

The first of the beacon fires was lit at 7.53 when the flotilla was sighted off Gordon Head, approaching between D'Arcy and Sidney Islands with Royal Canadian Air Force planes roaring overhead. In rapid succession there followed fires at Cattle Point, Trial Island and Gonzales Hill in Oak Bay, Clover Point and Grassy Point in the city and Macaulay Point and Albert Head.

As the flotilla rounded Clover Point flares and magnesium bombs were let off on the way into the Inner Harbor. As the Ss. Princess Marguerite proceeded at half speed into the harbor another beacon fire was lit in Victoria West and hand flares held by Chinese illuminated the city waterfront.

An Unforgettable Welcome

IT HAS BEEN TRULY SAID OF KING George and Queen Elizabeth since they landed on Canadian soil two weeks ago that they are normal people, imbued with normal instincts and impulses, interested in the normal people who inhabit this part of the British Commonwealth of Nations. Victorians had readily taken this description of Their Gracious Majesties for granted. They witnessed the full truth of it for themselves last night and will have experienced many more manifestations of it long before these words are read.

Naturally the vast concourse which had gathered to give Their Majesties a loyal and lusty welcome were disappointed when a brief shower dimmed the afterglow of the sunset. It was, of course, only a temporary climatic vagary after a day of brilliant sunshine. But King's weather—as was to be expected in this farthest western capital of the Empire—greeted our Royal visitors when they rose this morning, and as this is written the skies are bright. But if either the King or Queen were aware of the few raindrops last night neither betrayed the slightest indication of it. His Majesty carried out his inspection of the naval Guard of Honor as if the noon-day sun were shining on him; his gracious consort radiated an exuberance of charm as if she were about to take a stroll on the spacious lawns of Buckingham Palace or Windsor Castle.

Rightly may we say that many moons will wax and wane ere the thousands of Victorians who witnessed Their Majesties' arrival will again experience the thrill they experienced last night. It was that first glimpse of these "great human characters" which stirred something in every being—something which challenges an adequate translation into words. It was the moment for which the people of this community had been patiently waiting. And how genuine were those rounds of thunderous cheers!

These 37 hours of the Royal presence in Victoria will be memorable for reasons other than the loyalty and affection which our citizens have demonstrated. The King and Queen of Canada have now reached the turning point of a memorable tour which the historian will embellish with special significance, not only because it will have established precedents that fire the imagination, but also because it will have invested the British Crown with even greater strength and dignity—if that be possible—than it before possessed. So Long May King George and Queen Elizabeth Reign!

Statute a "Living Force"

MUCH HAS BEEN MADE BY SOME OF the more influential British dailies of the fact that while he is in Canada the King's title, while technically not altering, virtually is for the first time "King George VI of Canada, Great Britain and Ireland and the other Dominions." Which means that for the whole period of the Monarch's absence in this country Great Britain "becomes one of the King's Dominions beyond the seas." Let the Daily Mirror, of May 14, finish the reference:

"Thus the Statute of Westminster is given living force. But this is no time to linger on constitutional questions. The imagination of the people centres on the glamour and the glory of the Royal Tour. In 28 crowded Canadian days the King and Queen will receive a fervent and loyal welcome from diverse peoples united under the British flag. They will visit a city with the second biggest French-speaking population in the world—Montreal. English, Scottish, Irish, Welsh, besides races of alien origin, will hail the Royal progress. And when a King of England becomes for the first time the guest of the United States, his welcome will be no less tumultuous."

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain

WHEN THE HISTORIAN COMES TO deal with the outstanding events of these times, and approaches that part of his narrative concerned with the British Prime Minister, he will probably surmise Mr. Chamberlain from two distinct points of view—as a diplomat, of course, but a diplomat in the international and domestic realms.

We are inspired to suggest this by some remarks to which the Prime Minister gave voice at a recent conference of British Conservative women. These are the deft and gracious words in which he referred to his wife on that occasion: "She is the lady who knows all my secrets but never lets them out, who gently corrects my faults, who never forgets to praise me, who remembers all the things that I forget and who, for now nearly 30 years, has been my best friend and counsellor."

Thus spoke the real domestic diplomat. And when the Prime Minister so expressed himself he was rendering an estimate of his wife's loyalty and usefulness which has long been understood and appreciated by the British public at large. The sincerity and value of these sentiments will not be weakened by such divergences of opinion as may be held as to his sagacity in the international realm.

Arab and Jew

IT IS HARDLY LIKELY THE BRITISH government expects its latest proposal for the settlement of the difficulties between Arab and Jew in Palestine to be a howling success or even an effective temporary palliative. It holds out the hope, however, of the establishment within 10 years of an independent Palestinian State in which Arabs and Jews will share the government in such a way as to insure the essential interests of each community are safeguarded. It is not clear how this is to be done. The limit of both time and number of Jewish immigrants will place that community in a permanent minority and it is only natural that the Jews should be somewhat apprehensive on this score. But it should be borne in mind, on the other hand, that the Arabs are real democrats—as anti-totalitarian as the average intelligent Canadian.

It is not surprising to find the Jews protesting what they consider a breach of faith, a denial to the Jewish people of the right to reconstruct their national home in their ancestral country. The British government, anticipating this obvious protest, declares in the White Paper recently published that it is not part of its policy Palestine should become a Jewish state and reaffirms its earlier statement that a Jewish National Home should be founded in Palestine, but that Palestine, as a whole, should not be converted into a Jewish National Home. This distinction has angered the Jews without satisfying the Arabs, but it would seem to require a government of archangels to untangle the Palestinian mess.

Nazi Propaganda

ACTING UNDER INSTRUCTIONS FROM the Attorney-General of Quebec, a pro-Nazi film was seized recently in Montreal, and Premier Duplessis has instructed that "necessary procedures" be taken. He says the Quebec government "will not tolerate any Nazi propaganda, Communist propaganda, or any propaganda whatsoever which is contrary to the democratic institutions of this province."

This incident in Quebec once again emphasizes the fact that there is a type of propaganda, emanating from Germany and reaching citizens of Canada and the United States, about which little can be done by the authorities. It has been detected in numerous cities where communications are being received from relatives, friends, or mere acquaintances—known to be pro-Fascist or pro-Nazi—who are holidaying in the Reich. Much is made of the fact that there is no serious unemployment problem either in Germany or Italy, that Hitlerian or Mussolinian policies have produced and are producing contented peoples, that visitors who are interested in the economics of the totalitarian states are permitted full opportunity to examine at first hand industrial and other forms of production without let or hindrance. Indeed, communications referred to by not a few newspapers on this continent have almost suggested that executives of factories and welfare institutions have welcomed the foreigner with open arms, to impress them with the idea that the sign of the swastika or the fasces is something akin to a passport to the free and abundant life.

What the glib pro-Fascist or pro-Nazi is not permitted to see, of course, are the concentration camps, the inner workings of the military system which absorbs the workless and pays them a wage they may take—or take the consequences—and the "machinery" which has converted the individual into a tool for the state to use as it will.

Maybe too much talk about war is a patriotic service. The more people hear about it, the quicker they will be bored by it.

What this world needs is a little research country where people with freak ideas can try them out without punishing the rest of the world.

NO CANADIAN FLAG

From Winnipeg Free Press

There has been no mention of it in the House of Commons. Perhaps the members are too busy trying to finish the work of the session. But the fact is that the Red Ensign with the Canadian coat-of-arms in the fly is displayed not only on the Parliament Buildings but elsewhere throughout the capital as part of the decorations for the visit of Their Majesties.

The Red Ensign with the coat-of-arms in the fly is a flag which may be flown on Canadian ships at sea, but it has no status whatever ashore. To fly it on land is to violate the law, because there is only one Canadian flag on land—the Union Jack.

But it is not hard to understand why the Canadian government and nine out of ten of the citizens of the country are ignoring the law and displaying as the flag of Canada an emblem which has no legal standing. The officials in charge of decorating Ottawa decided to display the flags of the Commonwealth. They had the Australian flag, the New Zealand flag, South African flag, the flag of the Irish Free State and the New Zealand flag—a nice cluster of British flags. Then there was the Union Jack, obviously the flag of the United Kingdom. If they were to include two Union Jacks in each cluster of flags, would anybody guess that one was to represent Britain and the other Canada? But what could they put up to represent Canada? Legally, there was no answer to this question. And so they found but one way out of their difficulty. They took the illegal Red Duster with the Canadian coat-of-arms in the fly and put it along with the others.

The Ontario people who have opposed any action by the House of Commons to equip Canadians with a flag, have been looking at the decorations for the Royal Visit for many days and have had nothing to say about this disregard of the law.

As I See It

NEWSPAPER PROPHETS

ONE ADVANTAGE of being a newspaper prophet is that few people keep old newspapers and fewer still check over old editorial pages. Hence newspapermen in general and foreign correspondents in particular often build up quite undeserved reputations for second sight. The news magazine Time has been doing some research work in this field. It proves beyond all doubt that newspaper prophets are no more infallible than other kinds.

Captain Liddell Hart is considered by most people to be the outstanding authority on military matters in the English-speaking newspaper world. Yet he predicted disaster for the Italians in their invasion of Ethiopia.

Edgar Ansel Mowrer said that two years of war would crack Chinese morale.

G. E. R. Gedye was positive that, come what may, the Czech army would fight rather than yield.

Agur, whose real name is Valdimair Poliakoff, and who has probably secured more important scoops than any living journalist, occasionally sends out from his six-story London mansion guesses which would look ridiculous if anyone took the trouble to check them up later. On the very eve of Hitler's final annexation of Czechoslovakia Agur released an "inside story" to the effect that Germany was about to hand back the Sudetenland to the Czechs.

HITLER'S "INSIGNIFICANCE"

MISS DOROTHY THOMPSON is admittedly one of the most brilliant of living American columnists and writers. Last month she wrote with absolute certainty that there would be no war in Europe except "a war of words." Thereupon some people remembered that less than a year before Hitler came into power Miss Thompson wrote a book ("I Saw Hitler"), the keynote of which was as follows:

"When I finally walked into Adolf Hitler's salon in the Kaiserhof Hotel I was convinced that I was meeting the future dictator of Germany. In something less than 50 seconds I was quite sure that I was not. It took me just about that time to measure the startling insignificance of this man who has set the world agog."

Such occasional faux pas have not undermined confidence in really good newspaper writers, because their errors are very few as compared with their accurate reports and forecasts.

An exception is the Canadian expatriate journalist Mr. Arthur Beverley Baxter. He has the distinction of being wrong so often and so completely that a rough-and-ready guide to what is likely to happen in Europe is the reverse of what Mr. Baxter predicts.

DEMOCRATIC LIBERTY

From Prince Rupert Daily News

The one essential in a democracy is to admit that every man has a right to his opinion. He also has a right to express an opinion as long as it is not one that would tend to lead to violence. It is this liberty of action that is so greatly prized in a democracy.

Dictatorships are based on the use of force and the concentration camp in which a person may be detained without trial. Today thousands of men, innocent of any crime except that of holding an opinion, are held in concentration camps in Germany, Russia and other dictator countries.

This imprisonment without trial was one of the horrors against which British people fought for centuries. The Magna Charta signed by King John gave every man the right to trial by his peers. That did not end imprisonment without trial but it tended to get rid of the abuse and gradually it came that, except in war time, every man had the right to be tried.

LET THERE BE PEACE

(International Peace Hymn)
Tune: Melita ("Eternal Father")

Our Father-God, enthroned on high,
Cause war and strife on earth to cease;
O, hear Thy children as we cry
And grant all nations lasting peace;
May all obey the Law of Love—
That holy impulse from above.

When nations all one Father own
Good-will and honor shall increase;
True Brotherhood we shall enthroned
And bright shall dawn the Age of Peace;
No more shall man his brother hate
In home or commerce, Church or State.

Let vain ambition, greed and pride
No more inspire the thought of war;
May Truth and Justice be the guide
Where now intrigue and envy mar;
Thus shall the world rejoice to see
The fruits of true fraternity.

O, Thou Who camest from above
Thou'rt strife and hate on earth should cease.
Imbue our hearts with perfect love.
Then shall we dwell in perfect peace.

We shall forbear, we shall forgive,
For love doth teach men how to live.
By R. L. WERRY, Montreal.

AN OLD SONG

The lark these days
Trills sweeter lays,
And when the linnet sings,
A fresher tune,
A gayer rune
Across the meadow rings.

The sunbeams hold
More shining gold,
The sky more tender blue;
Most strange, I know,
That this is so,
But it's because of you!

As old as time,
This sort of rhyme,
For love is nothing new,
And in love's ways
Alone, these days,
I think, because of you!

PARADOX THAT IS LINDBERGH

From June Issue of Your Life Magazine

The paradox of Colonel Charles Lindbergh, being the most frantically exclusive fugitive from his admirers remains a puzzle only because the personality traits which permitted him to win unparalleled fame have never been clearly pointed out.

Nobody ever lived who was at all like the publicity-painted Lindbergh, and when he acts like himself instead of behaving as the hero-builders have led the public to expect, millions of myth addicts are deeply disappointed.

First, Lindbergh is not an aeronautical genius. He is an excellent flier, but there are other pilots just as good. Second, he never shrank from praise, applause or acclaim. Third, he does not shun human society because he feels haughty and superior, but because his social complex has reached an acute stage where he appears to feel miserably inadequate to meet any stranger, and correspondingly resents the necessity.

If Lindbergh had possessed just a little more social capacity, just a little more ability to charm people with his personality, he would never have flown the Atlantic Ocean because in that case he would not have been ridden by that gnawing secret feeling of inferiority which was at the same time his great weakness and his outstanding strength.

GLASS BLADES

From Christian Science Monitor
A glass razor blade, it is reported, will be soon available on the market. The housewife will remain skeptical until its worth is tested in cutting thread, sharpening pencils, trimming linoleum and scraping paint off the window glass.

HUMAN NATURE AND SOCIALISM

To the Editor:—All those who advocate Socialism, whether Communists, C.C.F.'s or Christian Socialists are constantly running up against that old retort "you can't change human nature." It comes from all sources: big business, political, banking, and ever from some sincere working people who apparently haven't taken the trouble to dig very deep into the question.

No doubt the early missionaries, who tried to convince cannibals that it was unethical to eat one another, were met with that same old chestnut that one hears so often today "you can't change human nature."

If Socialism is against human nature then why are we satisfied with public ownership of the post office, highways, police force, libraries and universities? Ask Winnipeg and Milwaukee if their successful public ownership of utilities is contrary to human nature and they will likely tell you that the question is not one of changing human nature but instead means its direction and enlightenment.

Socialism simply means doing what capitalism cannot do, viz., organizing the economy of the whole country in such a way that those who belong to the country will have a country that belongs to them; in this way people will be able to use the good things of life according to their power to produce them.

Millions of years of evolution have made human nature what it is. Fundamentally, I don't think it is so bad. Men and women often sacrifice their lives and suffer for others. Untold numbers died in 1914-18 for Democracy (their monuments are everywhere) so what is wrong with human nature? Should not people believe in themselves.

THE MONTH OF MAY

"Thou renewest the face of the earth."—Ps. 104:30.

Most wonderful of all the months
To me, is busy May;
Weaving her garments beautiful,
Doing it day by day,
Bringing to light each passing hour

God's silent and renewing power.
The trees, the hedges, fields and woods
Stand dressed in living green,
The air is filled with melody,
And flowers' supple arms are seen

Of every color, form and hue—
The crowning work of art so true.
With May the glorious orb of day
Throws light o'er all the land;
The sky is blue—a certain sign
That summer is at hand.

"As morning rises into noon
So May glides onward into June."
"Because 'thy secret name is Love'"

As someone has well said;
Because thy art is all so true
Great tributes have been paid;
So, in Thy wonders I'll rejoice
And to Thy praise lift up my voice.

I like selling Life Insurance

"After all, I am selling guaranteed financial security, the finest kind of 'property.'"

"You can purchase it on easy payments as low as 2% or 3% per year—and you get full title with your first payment."

"All payments cease immediately if you die, and the full value of your insurance estate (not merely what you had saved but all you had planned to save) is paid to your family."

"You have none of the worries incident to investment management. Loss, or even impairment of your capital, cannot happen if you keep the contract in force. Your investment is liquid. It will give you cash in an emergency and matures when most needed."

"Every sale I make performs a real service. No wonder I like selling life insurance."

AS DOWAGERS HIT THE CEILING

From Richmond Times Dispatch

Various eminentissimos in Washington are sweating heavily over the bad public reaction accorded plans for the garden party to be given at the British Embassy for King George and Queen Elizabeth. The mix-up over invitations has caused unlimited Washingtonian tongue-wagging, and it is said that no afternoon tea in that city is complete now without acidulous comment concerning the embassy's failure to invite this or that brass hat to the affair.

Poor Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, whose responsibility this is, are floundering about somewhat helplessly, as the dowagers raise lorgnettes over their latest faux pas, the town buzzes with gossip concerning their failure to invite Senator Sorghum, and the senator's spouse hits the ceiling in loud and indignant objurgations. One of the major breaks made by the Lindsays occurred when they omitted to ask a large percentage of the all-powerful Senate and the senators' wives. Only the members of the Foreign Relations Committee and certain committee chairmen were so honored.

Raymond Clapper has just written in his Washington column that "already this good-will mission has undone 20 years of effective cultivation of friendly feeling by Britain's most effective ambassador of good will, Sir Wilfrid Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times."

One finds it difficult to believe that the case is as bad as that, but certainly the effect upon a large segment of official Washington has been unfortunate.

HUMOR FROM ENGLAND

From London Humorist

Thieves have raided the till in a South London shop three times in seven weeks. This is known as a repeating rifle.

A scientist claims to have invented a machine that makes it possible to see through a man. Most married women will wonder why he is bothered.

A London barrister says it is his ambition to own a private golf course. We've been rather off our game lately, too.

The Scot keeps talkative strangers at arm's length because he is naturally shy, says a visitor. It's not that. It's because he naturally doesn't want to be touched.

A Mr. Bernard Shaw of London has been awarded a statuette by a Hollywood Academy for the best-written play of the year. The idea, apparently, is to encourage young writers.

CHANGED TIMES

From Winnipeg Tribune

When Nancy Astor hurriedly asked Maisky, Russian ambassador at London to lunch, the "ohs" and "ahs" about balance the jitters. But now that Comrade Beverly Baxter publicly admits attending a reception at the Soviet embassy, for the first time, the anti-aggression front may be taken as official.

Better English

1. What is wrong with this sentence? "Our work is nowhere near done."

Parallel Thoughts

Absalom said moreover, Oh that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and I would do him justice!—II Samuel 15:4.

Justice discards party, friendship, and kindred, and is therefore represented as blind.

HOLIDAY EVENTS

Holiday throngs had half-a-dozen events to claim their attention this afternoon and evening, with the big patriotic fireworks pageant as the highlight of the day.

From 4 to midnight the St. Joseph's Hospital Junior W.A. is sponsoring a frolic and games of chance at the Crystal Garden.

At 6.30 the Zulu Giants meet Victoria All-Stars in the second game of their baseball series at the Athletic Park.

At 8 the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry will present a display at Beacon Hill.

At 9 the fireworks pageant will begin, and at the same hour an old-time dance, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Pro Patria Branch, Canadian Legion, will start at the Foresters' Hall.

Tomorrow at 6.30 the Zulu Giants will play their final game with the Victoria baseball team at the Athletic Park. "A Night in an English Music Hall" will be presented at the Chamber of Commerce at 8 and half an hour

WANTS TO SEE KING—George Grexton, 100 years old, has hopes of personally meeting Their Majesties. In 1866 Mr. Grexton fought in the Fenian Raids and was wounded in both legs, right arm and head. He lives at Dulkeith Nursing Home, Pandora Avenue, where his wounds, which still give him trouble, are treated. For 32 years he sailed the Great Lakes with the C.P.R. and once traveled on a cattle boat to Liverpool. He was born in Ontario, October 16, 1838. His father, who was born in Ireland, died at the age of 112 years—but his mother died comparatively young, between 80 and 90, he says. Mr. Grexton takes a walk every day and reads without glasses.

later a street carnival will get under way at Blanshard and Yates Streets.

Arcanum Officers

W. D. MURGATROYD

The Elks' Hall, Douglas Street, was the scene of an impressive ceremony on Monday night when the newly-elected officers of the new council No. 1513, Royal Arcanum, were installed. The new slate of officers for the ensuing year consists of the following: Regent, W. D. Murgatroyd; vice-regent, R. B. Crombie; orator, S. Hole; past regent, D. Flintoff; chaplain, E. Estlin; guide, F. Watkins; warden, H. Maddaford; gentry, G. Brake; secretary, D. W. Spence; collector, J. J. Stewart; treasurer, K. T. Hughes; trustees, E. Blair, F. Mellan and F. Howland.

The ceremony was conducted in an able and dignified manner by Deputy Grand Regent H. G. Applegate, who also presented Douglas Flintoff, the retiring regent, with the past regent's jewel, at the same time complimenting him on his long term of office. At the close of the meeting a banquet followed by a concert. The youngest and newest member, Alan Clegg, was one of the soloists, whilst James McGrath delighted his audience with patriotic songs and "Albert" monologues. Ernest Crookford, another member, entertained with magic and ventriloquism. At the previous meeting the Royal Arcanum Council's degree team was judged by Thomas J. L. Kennedy, supreme committee man of Seattle, at which session 12 new members were inducted. Since that date four more candidates have been admitted, showing the growing popularity of this fine fraternal order. The team was rated very high in the competition and was extolled by the judge as the "Jewel of the Pacific Coast" among the Royal Arcanum councils of the west.

Floodlights Play On Royal Standard

The majestic red, gold and blue royal standard floated over Government House last night for all to see.

Hoisted immediately after Their Majesties' arrival at their Victoria home, the standard was illuminated by powerful floodlights. It stood out straight before a westerly wind and could be seen from all over the Foul Bay district.

Please the Bride BY CHOOSING GIFTS with the NATIONAL MARKS

THE appearance, alone, of any article manufactured from gold or silver cannot be accepted as an infallible guide to its intrinsic value. But the name of the manufacturer, or his trade mark, linked with the marks indicating Canadian Government standards of quality... these marks together, are entirely reliable. The bride will be delighted if her ring or silverware bears the National Marks.

It was to remove all uncertainty in the purchaser's mind and to prevent fraudulent and unfair competition that the Canadian Government passed the Precious Metals Marking Act. This Act is administered by the Department of Trade and Commerce. All articles of gold, silver or platinum, or articles plated with these precious metals, that are offered for sale in the Dominion are under the jurisdiction of the Department of Trade and Commerce whether manufactured in Canada or imported from other countries. Where the article is wholly of Canadian manufacture a National Mark may be used which consists of a large letter "C" within which is the King's Crown if the article is of gold; or the Lion's Head if the article is of sterling silver.

Other services the Department is rendering the public through the Precious Metals Marking Act include the inspection of articles offered for sale or imported into Canada and the checking of advertisements to prevent misleading or incorrect statements.

When purchasing articles manufactured from gold and silver, be sure to observe the National Marks and the Trade Marks and note their significance to you.

Distinguishing Marks of Gold and Silver Articles

The letter "C" encircled is the National Mark on articles of gold which are wholly of Canadian manufacture. It is used only in conjunction with a karat mark indicating the fineness of the gold.

Pure gold is 24 karat. The number "18" indicates the fineness of the gold. Thus an article of 18 karat gold contains 18 parts of pure gold and 6 parts of suitable alloy. Gold articles must not be less than 9 karat.

A Lion's Head encircled is the National Mark for articles of silver which are entirely Canadian made. This mark applies only to articles which also bear the "Sterling" mark.

The word "Sterling" on silver articles indicates that they contain pure silver in the proportion of 925 parts in every 1,000 parts.

Standard quality Silver-Plate on flat ware is marked "14" while the mark "Triple Plate" indicates a silver-plating three times heavier than standard plate.

The word "Gold Filled" indicates that the gold content of the article is not less than one-twentieth of 10 karat gold by weight and that the gold is soldered to the base metal.

Silver-plated hollow-ware is the trade term for tea sets, trays, vases and dishes of various kinds made of metal and plated with silver. The term Silver-plated flat-ware includes knives, forks and spoons made of metal, and silver-plated. The Precious Metals Marking Act requires that all silver-plated flatware must be stamped with the predominant base metal used, if it is less than 10 per cent nickel.

Propagandists Given Warning

Lapointe Tells Commons Persons Spreading Isms May Lose Naturalization

OTTAWA (CP)—Naturalization certificates of persons of foreign birth who spread objectionable propaganda may be cancelled, Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, told the House of Commons today as his new official secrets law passed through second and third readings.

Foreign government representatives in Canada had been advised that it is not their duty to interfere with naturalized citizens who were former nationals of their countries, the minister also told the House in answer to A. A. Heaps, C.C.F., Winnipeg North, who raised the question of Nazi espionage and propaganda.

Mr. Lapointe said he hoped his statement about naturalization certificates would strike as a warning as any naturalized British subject convicted under the Official Secrets Act would certainly lose his certificate.

"The government is keeping well informed on what is going on in this field" (espionage), said Mr. Lapointe. "My own conviction is that neither Nazi, Fascist nor Communist activity is a serious factor in any part of Canada."

FROM MONTREAL
Mr. Heaps alleged Montreal was the centre of a Nazi spy ring which operated throughout Canada and that Nazi propaganda activities calculated to stir up racial feeling and disturbances was being carried on.

Free speech was necessary to democratic institutions, said Mr. Lapointe, but it did not confer on organizations which had betrayed free speech the right to carry on activities aimed at the destruction of democratic institutions.

"The government," he said, "has, on some occasions, reminded the agents or representatives of foreign governments that their duties do not include a proprietary interest in the activities of naturalized Canadians who may once have been nationals of their countries."

"I am convinced 95 per cent of our foreign population are opposed to the views some people are trying to inspire and are loyal to Canada. It would be a great mistake to attribute to all the former nationals of certain countries the views the representatives of those countries are trying to spread."

Since Russia was now about to become an ally of democratic powers, Mr. Heaps thought Communism should not be linked with Fascism and Nazism.

EQUALLY OPPOSED
Mr. Lapointe said he had to differ with the Winnipeg member in that. Communism was just as abhorrent to him, regardless of what military pacts were signed, as the other two movements.

A new type of international propaganda had arisen since the war, said the minister, and various governments had established a routine of stirring up class and racial prejudice abroad as a means of carrying out their ideas. In times of depression the seeds of such propaganda were more likely to fall on fertile soil.

"Despite a certain amount of flamboyant advertising anti-democratic movements have not made any headway in Canada," he added, "and I hope that Canadian common sense will always prevent them from making headway."

He explained the bill was a consolidation of the British Official Secrets Acts of 1911 and 1920, and the first of which had been applicable to Canada previously. Experience during the war had made advisable a considerable amendment to the 1911 act in 1920.

The minister pointed out that, in accordance with the national status established by the Statute of Westminster in 1931, the bill before the House placed the complete provisions in Canadian law.

MAYHEW HEADS MANUFACTURERS
Elected Chairman Of B.C. Division Of Association

VANCOUVER (CP)—R. W. Mayhew, M.P. of Victoria, will head the British Columbia division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association as chairman for the next year. He was elected at its annual meeting here.

Alex McKelvie, retiring chairman after two terms, was unable to be present owing to illness, and his annual report was presented by J. H. McDonald of New Westminster, B.C., a former chairman.

Colonel H. S. Tobin, unavailably absent, was acclaimed vice-chairman.

Roosevelt Prepares For Visit of King

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP)—President Roosevelt passed up Dutchess County observances of Memorial Day today to go over plans for minor improvements at his hill-top cottage, where a picnic lunch may be served King George and Queen Elizabeth on June 11.

James Townsend, chairman of the county democratic committee, who called on the President yesterday, said the changes "involve some more clearing of the property and general fixing up."

FRANCO PLEDGES SPAIN TO PEACE

Medina del Campo, Spain (AP)—Gen. Francisco Franco today pledged Spain to the path of peace, and declared the country would keep hands off any adventures that might threaten to involve her in a European war.

The Nationalist chief declared in a seven-minute address during victory celebrations of nearly 11,000 women Falangists (Fascists):

"I want Spain to become a fortress, but I do not want her to become a fortress to plunge herself into any adventure," he said. "I want her to become a fortress of peace. War goes far and involves the weaker countries; war respects the strong, and I want Spain to be strong so she will be able to assure her peace."

The women wore blue shirts and skirts and red caps in a parade that brought to a climax victory demonstrations honoring Gen. Franco.

U.S. URGED TO AVOID 'ISMS'

Europe's Defects Not Wanted, Says Senator On Memorial Day

WASHINGTON (AP)—United States Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio, standing amid the graves of thousands who fought in past wars, urged today the U.S. avoid Europe's "isms" and wars alike.

"American principles," he said at Memorial Day exercises in Arlington Cemetery, "have succeeded as no other principles have succeeded."

"In our desire to meet our economic problems we need not imitate European ideals, or substitute for individual freedom any paternal direction from Washington."

"We must not substitute for industry and thrift and a proper recognition of ability, any alien panaceas of a purely socialistic nature. There are all kinds of democracy in this world, but we must be concerned with preserving American democracy."

"We cannot hope to cure the situation in Europe, produced by the crowding into a small continent of scores of hostile races. Some persons, Mr. Taft said, 'favor methods short of war, but no nation can take methods short of war unless it is prepared to carry through the war to which such measures inevitably lead.'"

"I believe we can stay out of war if we are determined to do so. We can prepare ourselves for defence against actual attack, and we have taken the necessary steps. But I cannot see the slightest ground for the fear that any foreign nation is likely to attack us."

BRITISH LABOR AIDS CONSCRIPTION

Party Links With Underground Anti-Hitler Press in Germany

SOUTHPORT, Eng. (CP)—The British Labor Party conference today rejected by a large majority a resolution pledging the party to oppose all and any forms of conscription. The vote was 1,670,000 to 285,000.

Philip Noel-Baker said: "We have reached the point in international affairs when at every cost brutal armed force has got to be restrained."

He said the party was in communication with the underground anti-Hitler press in Germany. "We write messages for the secret German press which circulates in Hitler's country," he said. "We are trying to make it clear to the German people that we don't want to encircle them but only to encircle aggression."

Atlantic Plane's Fate Mystery

No Field in Britain Reports T. H. Smith's Flivver From Maine

LONDON (AP)—The bold attempt of 24-year-old Thomas H. Smith to span the North Atlantic in a flivver-type plane seldom used for flights of more than 250 miles appeared today to have ended tragically.

Three curiously dove-tailed reports that a small plane—possibly Smith's Aerona monoplane—had been sighted over Britain kept hope alive and the boundary light aglow at Croydon airport until early this morning, but at 2 a.m. (6 p.m. P.S.T., Monday), officials snapped off the lights—acknowledgement the young Californian scarcely was expected.

At that moment, 41 hours 13 minutes had elapsed since Smith lifted his heavily-laden plane from the sands of Old Orchard Beach, Me., 3,100 miles from Croydon, with enough fuel for about 3,600 miles, or 36 to 42 hours of flight.

CROWD DISAPPEARS
With the darkening of the field, only officials, ground crew, newspapermen and photographers were left of the thousands on holiday who had thronged Croydon in expectation of welcoming the flier. Officials reckoned the elapsed time against Smith's $30 worth of fuel and oil, shook their heads and reiterated it was a "crazy flight."

The "Baby Clipper"—Smith's name for the 670-pound machine powered with four-cylinder, 65-horsepower engine—was believed to have been pointed for Slyne Head, Ireland. But before the Sunday take-off Smith answered questions as to his destination with "Europe is as close as I can tell you."

PARENTS WAIT
CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP)—Tommy Smith's parents kept an all-night vigil beside their radio and telephone, hoping every minute for word their son had escaped death on a trans-Atlantic flight they had tried in vain to halt.

Eye-sore from their struggle to keep away through the long watch, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith clung resolutely to their faith in the ability of their third-born to win out with his "Baby Clipper" plane.

While lengthening hours brought no confirmation report of the flier's fate, the stoical mother prayed she still would be able to dispatch this cablegram penned soon after Smith's take-off:

"Congratulations, Tommy. Please come home by boat for my sake."

Having no advance notice, the 69-year-old parents were amazed when informed early Sunday Smith was poised in Maine for his efforts to span the ocean. They told of trying to reach him by telephone to plead that he abandon plans for the flight, but Smith had been gone an hour when they finally got a connection.

Russia Replies to British Plan

Maisky Gives Views In London; Molotoff to Speak Tomorrow

LONDON (AP)—The Russian ambassador, Ivan Maisky, called at the Foreign Office today and was believed in informed quarters to have conveyed at least Moscow's general views on the latest negotiations for a mutual assistance pact linking the Soviet with the Anglo-French anti-aggression front.

It was the ambassador's first Foreign Office visit since Great Britain sent new proposals to Russia for the three-power agreement.

ADDRESS AT MOSCOW
MOSCOW (AP)—Foreign Minister Molotoff tomorrow may lift the fog that has shrouded Russian foreign policy through the negotiations with Great Britain and France for a mutual assistance accord.

Molotoff is to speak before the Supreme Soviet, or "parliament," in the midst of reports, unconfirmed, that fighting is in progress between troops of Outer Mongolia, which is within the Soviet sphere of influence, and Japanese-Manchukuo soldiers.

Most observers believed Molotoff would dispel some of the uncertainty which has existed since Joseph Stalin's declaration March 10 that Russia would be "no cat's paw" of other powers, and particularly since Maxim Litvinoff's sudden replacement as Foreign Commissar.

BRITAIN INVITES POLISH MARSHAL

Smigly-Rydz Asked To Attend Autumn Army Manoeuvres

LONDON (CP)—The British government today invited Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, inspector-general of the Polish army, to attend British army manoeuvres next autumn.

MARSHAL SMIGLY-RYDZ

A similar invitation has been sent to the Soviet War Commissar, Klement Voroshiloff. If these invitations are accepted the September manoeuvres at Aldershot will bring together the chiefs of the general staffs of Great Britain, France, the Soviet and Poland.

It was assumed that Smigly-Rydz was invited, so he might meet Voroshiloff on neutral territory in Britain.

LAST SALUTE TO SUBMARINE'S DEAD

U.S. Navy Pays Tribute to 26 Lost in Squalus

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP)—The United States navy paid tribute today to the 26 dead aboard the sunken submarine Squalus.

The cruiser Brooklyn and the destroyer Semmes sent 21-gun salutes over the rolling waters which hide the $4,000,000 sunken submarine and her ghostly crew, 15 miles off this port.

Ashore, the 33 survivors attended Memorial Day services at the Portsmouth navy yard for their comrades who died in flooded after compartments when the Squalus went down in 40 fathoms a week ago today.

For one man there was an other lonely tribute. Ruth DeSautel, 20, of Dover, N. H., cast a wreath on the water at the scene of the disaster in memory of Sherman Shirley, the man to whom she was to have been married Sunday.

Operation at Sea
SUVA, Fiji—A successful appendicitis operation was performed when an engineer of the W. B. Walker was transferred to the British motorship Niagara at sea, after the Niagara had been diverted 100 miles.

Primate's Palace Seized By Nazis

Archbishop Returns To Salzburg and Finds It Occupied

BERLIN (AP)—Nazi authorities have seized the palace of Archbishop Sigmund Waltz, Catholic Primate of Germany, removed all the furniture and turned over the historic building to the black-shirted Elite Guard troops.

The Archbishop was out of town yesterday on a religious mission when furniture vans drew up to the palace. A dozen workmen carried out all the furnishings, which were placed in storage.

The Archbishop was notified last month the government would no longer permit him to use the palace, which was contested, was the property of the state.

The Primate appealed directly to Chancellor Hitler, asking him to rescind the order. Hitler took no action.

Local authorities finally decided to move out the Primate's possessions, bag and baggage.

PHOTOS TAKEN
Government photographers preceded the movers who entered the Archbishop's palace, which is at Salzburg. Pictures were taken in all rooms, presumably to forestall any possibility of a contention in the future some object had been misplaced.

The Archbishop returned to Salzburg today to find his home empty and an S.S. organization preparing to move in. He took temporary lodging in a seminary, uncertain what his next step would be.

In his appeal to Hitler the Archbishop pointed out that whereas the Archbishop's Palace had been government property since 1802, Emperor Francis II of Austria had assured church authorities certain Salzburg properties, including the palace, could be used by the church indefinitely.

Obscure legal questions were involved, but authorities insisted the building was needed by the S.S.

Death Sentence For Madrid Youth
MADRID (AP)—Convicted of 800 murders in Madrid, 21-year-old Jose Delamora Gallia was condemned today by a military tribunal at Santander to death by the garrote.

Delamora Gallia, with 10 other youths, was accused of establishing an "investigation brigade" allegedly responsible for the arrest of 3,500 Nationalist sympathizers. Most of those arrested, it was charged, were killed.

Gallia confessed he had shot 800 prisoners.

Legion Men Urged To Support Peace

LONDON (CP)—Major Sir Francis Fetherston-Godley, national chairman of the British Legion, today appealed for continued efforts by British ex-servicemen to maintain their contacts with veterans of other nations as an aid to world peace.

Even though the relations with nations such as Germany may be difficult, it still is necessary to maintain contacts among veterans, he told the annual Legion convention.

B.C.'s Welcome And King's Reply

Historically Memorable Visit, Says Premier Pattullo

Address from the Province of British Columbia.

To His Most Gracious Majesty, George VI, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

May it please Your Majesty: It is my humble privilege, on behalf both of the government and of the people of British Columbia, to express to Your Majesty the heartfelt pride and pleasure with which we acclaim Your Majesty's presence amongst us, and we welcome Your Majesty to this far western province of the Dominion of Canada with heartfelt devotion and loyalty.

It is also my humble privilege to express the delight our people feel that Your Majesty is accompanied upon this memorable occasion by Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Elizabeth, and to assure Your Majesty of the high esteem, warm affection and devoted loyalty with which Her Majesty is regarded.

We recall with pride that, almost a century ago, the city destined to become the capital of this province was named "Victoria" in honor of Your Majesty's great-grandmother, Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria. We recall further that the Province of British Columbia itself bears the name chosen by Her Majesty Queen Victoria in the year 1838. For these reasons the loyalty and affection with which the people of our province and of this city regard Your Majesty and your gracious Consort will have an added significance.

The visit of Your Majesties to Canada is destined to be more profoundly and historically memorable in that it constitutes the first occasion upon which the people of Canada and of this province have had the privilege of greeting their reigning Sovereign and his consort. It is our heartfelt hope that the memories of this visit of Your Majesties to our Province of British Columbia may, in the years to come, always remain filled with pleasant recollections of the spontaneous demonstration of the joy, loyalty and affection so clearly manifest in the hearts of our people.

We pray that the Almighty, in His Providence, will long spare Your Majesty to reign over us and will bless you both with health, with peace, and with happiness.

I remain, with profound veneration, Your Majesty's faithful subject and devoted servant, (Sgd.) T. D. PATTULLO, Prime Minister.

Shaw Wins Car Race; Floyd Roberts Dies

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY (AP)—Floyd Roberts, daring driver of Van Nuys, Calif., died of injuries today in a three-car smash-up as Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis veteran, raced to victory in the 500-mile classic.

His Majesty Refers to His Great-grandmother

Reply to the address from the Province of British Columbia:

I wish to thank you most sincerely for the kind and loyal sentiments to which your address, on behalf of the government and people of British Columbia, gives expression, and to assure you that the Queen and I are deeply touched by the warmth of the welcome we have received in this province.

Here in your delightful capital it is gratifying to be reminded that its name honors the memory of my illustrious great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, and that the name of the province itself was chosen by her more than a century ago.

The people of British Columbia are blessed with rich and varied resources, and their efforts, inspired by the courage and enterprise of those who came before them, have made an impressive contribution to this great Dominion and to the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The Queen and I, in our journey through British Columbia, have much enjoyed its scenic beauties and we regret that time does not permit us to extend our visit to other portions of the province.

May Divine Providence continue to bless and prosper the people of British Columbia.

Street, with a small detachment of troops on guard at the corner, and the cheers of children already surging down from the school 200 yards away.

Outside the school the Royal car and its red-coated motorcycle escort slowed almost to a stop. On one side the massed children stood against the tall trees of the Lamson Street School grounds, on the other the old people of the municipality filled long low stands.

At the corner a small, grizzled group of veterans with a banner, members of the old-time Northwest Mounted.

GREETINGS TO PRINCESSES
A little farther on, a banner proclaiming "Scotland Forever," and beneath it the words: "Esquimalt, B.C. sends greetings to the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose."

The procession gathered speed again down the long straight stretch of Lamson Street where there are fields on either side. Here were only a few spectators, some of them comfortably settled on the bank with blankets and cushions.

Crowds again on Craigflower Road. Then Tillamook Road. School children from outside the Victoria district proudly carrying banners: "Happy Valley School Welcomes You," "Lanark School."

Leaving Esquimalt over the Gorge bridge the Royal car slowed again almost to a stop. Across the municipality boundary was a splendid arch with the name of Saanich emblazoned on it in gold and blue, and above it the arms of British Columbia.

Behind the arch the school children of Saanich were massed on the grass bank at either side of the road, cheering their loudest and waving their flags in a solid hedge of color.

The procession turned onto Gorge Road, with scouts and guides stretched in a long line saluting as Their Majesties passed.

"COME AGAIN SOON"
Into the city again. Two tiny boys, one wearing the kilt, standing on a platform at the roadside carrying a banner, "Come Again Soon."

The crowds thicker again, voices coming to the procession distinctly in lulls of the cheering: "Isn't she Pretty?" "Doesn't he look young?"

Still more people in the wide space where the Gorge Road, Hillside Avenue and Douglas and Government Streets meet.

Just up Hillside the children of the North Ward School were lined up in the national costumes of many countries of both west and east, behind them "God Save the King and Queen" on a streamer.

White-shirted cadets formed a guard of honor on either side of the tableaux.

Along the steady rise of Hillside the crowds were thinner again, except for a cluster at the corner of Quadra Street. At the top of the hill the cars slowed again to swing down Fernwood Road, and here again the school children thronged on either side.

At the bottom of the Fernwood hill the crowd was jammed tight, with amateur photographers perched on the top of a truck to get pictures as the Royal car turned onto Haultain Street.

On Richmond Avenue came the most touching scene of the whole procession. Outside the isolation wards of the Jubilee Hospital and again outside the Nurses' Home invalids and cripples, swathed in blankets, lined the roadside, some seated, others stretched out in wheeled cots or invalid chairs.

The Royal car slowed to a crawl and Their Majesties waved greetings.

The nurses massed behind their patients suddenly broke their ranks and streamed across the lawn to get a second view of the King and Queen as their car turned onto Fort Street.

IN OAK BAY
Oak Bay greeted Their Majesties with the loudest cheers of any place outside the business district of Victoria.

Long blue banners hanging from slender white poles, massed tabards carried by white-clothed women of the I.O.D.E. and masses of greenery everywhere made the setting.

In it were cheering rows of school children and tall bleachers packed with their elders.

A few feet farther along two great streamers hung overhead: "Loyal Greetings from Oak Bay," and "The Boys and Girls of Oak Bay Welcome Their Beloved King and Queen."

Still more children waving flags and cheering themselves hoarse. Still more grown-ups rising in their seats and cheering also.

At the corner of Cranmore Road and Hampshire Road Scouts and Cubs formed a guard of honor.

Half way along the cool winding length of Hampshire Road the men of the Oak Bay fire department stood in a smart line. All around them, on sidewalks, front lawns, verandas, in windows, the people of Oak Bay cheered the Royal procession on its way.

At the Municipal Hall another huge crowd, with bleachers packed right up to their highest rows. Then on Oak Bay Avenue veterans lining the route. More people on front porches and bleachers.

At the municipal limits the Royal car rolled between more tall white pylons and blue banners, with a streamer overhead proclaiming "Oak Bay Says God Speed and Farewell."

At the Junction another great throng was massed, and the sidewalks through the Dardanelles were well lined. At the foot of the Fort Street hill the procession was back into formal again, with United States and Canadian Scouts and Sea Scouts lining the street, then after the motionless lines of the navy and the army.

From Fort Street the Royal car turned onto Government and drew up on time at 12.20 before the Empress Hotel lawn, with the crowd dashing over the grass to get a last view of Their Majesties before they entered the hotel for the government luncheon.

At the foot of the main steps they were met by J. K. Hodges, manager of the Empress Hotel, who was presented by Premier Pattullo. Mr. Hodges and the Premier escorted the Queen through the rotunda where she and His Majesty stepped into the elevator for their suite on the third floor, looking out over the harbor, from where they could see the crowds massed on the lawns.

Hotel guests were massed in the rotunda and they sent up a great cheer as Their Majesties entered the glass doors and walked to the elevators.

Czech Funds Go to Germany

$25,000,000 in Bank of England Handed Over to Reich

BASEL, Switzerland (AP)—The Bank for International Settlements today announced it had "been forced" to authorize handing over to Germany about $25,000,000 which had been deposited in the Bank of England for the Czechoslovak National Bank.

The authorization was made after official demand "from the new administration of the Czech National Bank," the B.I.S. said. (The fate of the Czech funds, deposited in London before the March partition of Czechoslovakia, has aroused the concern of House of Commons. Last Friday David Lloyd George obtained a promise from the government legal advice would be sought as to whether there was any way of preventing Germany from obtaining the funds.)

"The British government could not oppose this stand for the simple reason that deposits made to the bank for international settlement by the central issuing banks have been made immune, that is, no right of retention can be exerted against them," the B.I.S. declared.

The international bank said its only role in turning over the funds deposited in London was to verify the signatures of the Czech request for the money.

Royal Arrival Commemorated

United Empire
Loyalists Dedicate Tree
To Mark Event

The visit of the King and Queen to Victoria was commemorated by United Empire Loyalists last night with the dedication of a maple tree in Beacon Hill Park, near the Mayor's Grove. The ceremony was held at 7.30, preceding the arrival of Their Majesties.

The ceremony opened with the singing of O Canada, and was followed with a talk by J. H. Taber, president of the Victoria Loyalists, who briefly sketched the early history of the Loyalists in Canada. He dealt with their exile from the 13 colonies and their trek to the maritime provinces, Quebec and Ontario. Today their descendants were scattered from sea to sea in the Dominion, and were proud of their tradition of loyalty.

The address was followed with the singing of "The Maple Leaf Forever" and the dedication prayer by Rev. J. L. W. McLean. At the close each Loyalist who attended the ceremony passed by the tree and touched it, after which they gathered in a circle and sang the National Anthem.

Queen Smiles Her Way Into Hearts Of Victorians

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth stood for three minutes on the C.P.R. landing platform last night and smiled her way into the hearts of thousands of Victorians who had gathered hours before the Royal ship docked.

The Queen smiled and waved her hand as she walked down the gangway with His Majesty. A tremendous roar arose from the crowds along Belleville Street, many of whom took their seats on the curbs at 5.45.

Her Majesty wore a pale blue wool crepe dress, with matching jacket, the bodice embroidered in silver with the same embroidery on the sleeves. On her jacket was blonde fox fur. She wore grey shoes and grey stockings and an off-the-face felt hat in palest blue. A diamond clasp held her double-strand of pearls and on the left side of her jacket was a diamond maple leaf.

Mrs. Hamber was in a beige crepe suit, the shoulder cape being banded around the neck and down the front with ash fox. With it she wore a modified Breton sailor made entirely of pressed brown veiling, with pink and blue flowers in front of the crown, and her shoes and accessories were in the brown tones.

Mrs. T. D. Pattullo, who accompanied the Premier aboard the vessel to greet Their Majesties, was in black crepe, with a silver fox cape, and a small black hat trimmed with a red rose, while Mrs. McGavin, wife of the Mayor, wore a two-piece ensemble of yellow striped sheer, with a coat with the new shirred pelum, a yellow felt hat and mink cape.

While the King quickly inspected the naval guard of honor, drawn up on Belleville Street, Her Majesty talked with Mrs. Hamber, being joined by His Honor, with the Premier and Mrs. Pattullo.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King stood just behind, with the ladies-in-waiting and other attendants, including several scarlet-coated Mounted Police.

As the Naval Band struck up God Save the King, Her Majesty shook hands with Capt. Victor G. Brodeur, who left immediately with His Majesty for the inspection of the guard of honor.

The inspection took three minutes. Still smiling and looking vastly pleased at the myriad of lights that greeted her and Her Royal consort, Her Majesty joined the King and together they stepped into their maroon-colored open car, with top down and the Royal standard flying from the windshield. The seat in which they sat was enclosed in glass. When the car started and made the turn to Belleville Street, Her Majesty waved and smiled again to the closely-congested crowds lining the streets.

As the Majesties stepped into the car another shower fell, but the King and Queen paid no notice. A few minutes later, however, Her Majesty raised her umbrella.

The Mothers' Meeting was held in Emmanuel Baptist Church with Mrs. Pinkerton presiding. Mrs. Colwell read the Scriptures, followed by prayer. Mrs. Blythe was the speaker and Dr. Irvine gave an impressive message. Miss Seymore sang a hymn. Mrs. Buckett played a piano solo. Tea hostesses for the day were Mrs. H. Parfitt, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Patterson. Mrs. Zala and Mrs. Miles poured tea. The next meeting will be in September.

The Gleaners' Mission Circle met at the home of Helen Peaker on Wednesday evening, with Jean Wilson in the chair. After the devotional led by Gladys Schroeder, Marjorie Timberlake sang "The Stranger of Galilee," accompanied by Mr. G. Peaker. Mrs. G. Guy gave an inspiring message on Missions. Refreshments were served by the hostess. Arrangements are being made for the annual tea to be held at the home of the honorary president, Mrs. MacLennan, 311 Vancouver Street, on June 3. An interesting program is being arranged and all friends are invited. The next meeting will be held at the home of Winnie Currie.

Pastel Colors Worn At Royal Functions Today

Her Majesty's Orchid Ensemble Delicate Note in Galaxy
Of Blues, Greys and Beiges Worn by Presentees

In deference to the desire, attributed to Queen Elizabeth, that no black gowns should be worn at the various Royal functions arranged in connection with Their Majesties' tour of the Dominion, Victoria women who had the honor of being presented to the King and Queen today chose the light, pastel shades for which the Queen has a penchant.

Blues, in all the gamut of shades from powder to aquamarine, pale greys, beiges and pinks were predominant in the smart ensembles and frocks worn at the provincial government's luncheon at the Empress Hotel and at the government's reception at the Parliament Buildings. And with the introduction of vivid color accents in floral trimmings on hats and in the accessories, the resultant effect resembled that of a gay and animated flower garden, so charming was the combination of colors.

QUEEN IN ORCHID

Her Majesty chose an exquisite and delicate shade of orchid which enhanced the rose-leaf of her complexion and the pansy-blue of her eyes.

Mrs. Hamber's lovely ensemble combined beige and Elizabeth blue, the full-skirted frock of beige having a top of ruffled blue lace, with which she wore a modified sailor of the blue moire, with two tiny birds atop the crown, veiled in blue. Sable furs and beige shoes and accessories completed her smart toilette.

Mrs. Barnard, wife of Senator G. H. Barnard, was in a frock of accordion-pleated navy blue crepe, with a navy coat lined with white, and a smart hat of navy trimmed with white flowers, and Mrs. Green, wife of Senator R. F. Green, chose the new color, Mayflower lilac, for her triple-sheer ensemble, worn with a black hat with lilac floral trimming.

Mrs. J. H. King's gown of Regina blue crepe was worn with a cape of the same, lined with fuchsia, with rolled folds of the blue and fuchsia outlining the neck of the cape and the armholes of the frock. Her large picture hat was of black straw and her accessories were in the fuchsia tone.

Mrs. T. D. Pattullo wore a smart model ensemble in honey-beige crepe, embroidered in pastel floral motifs on the bodice, and with it wore a wide-brimmed hat of black bangkok straw trimmed with two large silk roses in pink and deeper rose veiled in finest silk veiling, and sharply upturned at the back. Her daughter, Mrs. Clifford Colison, was in a redingote model of printed silk crepe in a toast and cream pattern on black, with which she wore a hat of natural straw trimmed with black velvet ribbon.

Mrs. R. W. Mayhew was in a gown of beige crepe, with a pleated skirt, and a yoke and sleeves of beige marquisette, with a Royal purple Breton sailor hat, bag and flowers to lend color accent.

CABINET MINISTERS' WIVES

Mrs. John Hart's ensemble was of pearl grey novelty crepe, with a finger-tip length jacket over the tucked frock, and a Gainsborough model hat of wedgewood blue, with matching blue shoes, bag and accessories; Mrs. F. M. MacPherson was smart in triple blue sheer in a Regina blue shade, trimmed from the left shoulder to the hemline with folds of the blue in two shades combined with Mayflower lilac, and a corsage bouquet of the same three tones, with shoes and bag in the lighter tone of blue.

Mrs. K. C. MacDonald's frock was a Milgrim model in Rosevelt blue and white print crepe, with black hat and accessories.

Mrs. W. J. Asselstine's redingote was of navy blue sheer, with white accents in the patent leather belt, and white hat, with navy accessories.

Mrs. G. M. Weir chose a two-piece frock of dusty pink crepe, the waist featuring eyelet embroidery in self tones and star-shaped buttons in a lighter shade. Her hat was of white, with roses in the two tones of pink, and her accessories white.

Mrs. G. S. Wismer's dress of purple crepe had a gracefully draped bodice and accordion-pleated skirt, with which she wore a navy blue, wide-brimmed hat with purple shaded flowers, a navy fitted coat of heavy silk, and matching accessories.

Mrs. George S. Pearson's frock of dove grey crepe was worn with a bolero coat, braided in self color, a choux of orchid flowers lending color at the waistline. Her large hat was of grey straw trimmed with orchid flowers. Miss Dorothy Pearson, daughter of the Minister of Labor and Mrs. Pearson, was in a frock of Mayflower lilac, worn with a bolero of deeper tone, her wide-brimmed hat being also in the darker shade.

Mrs. Norman Whittaker was in a two-piece desert rose crepe jacket dress, relieved with large navy flowers, with hat of navy adorned with a front pastel feather trim and navy accessories.

JUDGES' WIVES

Mrs. Gordon Sloan's imported ensemble was of Queen's blue silk crepe with which she wore a dusty pink hat trimmed with small-blue flowers, a twin fox scarf, blue shoes and accessories, while her daughter, Buntie, was in an imported reseda green frock, with a pin-tucked bodice and sunburst pleated skirt, and wide-brimmed navy hat trimmed in reseda, with green shoes and bag.

Hunter wore a frock of flowered chiffon in powder blue and rose, with a picture hat of powder blue, and matching shoes and accessories.

Miss Hyslop Gray, daughter of Hon. Wells Gray, was in a three-piece ensemble of ashes of roses fine wool, with short-sleeved, buttoned jacket beneath the long coat and navy hat and accessories.

Mrs. E. V. Finland's ensemble was of sheer in aquamarine blue, with a dusty pink hat and purse.

Miss Dorothy Wismer, daughter of the Attorney-General, wore a navy blue crepe redingote over an Elizabeth blue frock inset with lace to tone, and her straw hat and accessories were of white. Her sister, Miss Shirley Wismer, was in a printed sheer, patterned in cyclamen, green and white on a grey background, with which she wore a mushroom hat of straw trimmed with flowers to tone, and a navy redingote and accessories.

Government House Floral Setting Is Lovely

Exquisite Blooms
Arranged for Royal Visitors

Government House, notable in this "City of Gardens" for the unusual beauty of floral decor of its many perfectly arranged functions, has excelled itself for the Royal Visit. Under the artistic direction of Mrs. E. W. Hamber, the gubernatorial residence has been transformed into a floral bower of striking beauty and dignity, fit setting for a King and Queen.

In the entrance hall, the great stone fireplace has been banked on either side with exotic schanz-nthus in palest pink and orchid tones, while at each side of the main door palest pink and mauve hydrangeas and giant calceolarias in the pastel shades are banked in a solid mass of delicate color.

In the newly-furnished and re-decorated drawing-room, the flowers have been chosen to blend in with the leaf-green and pale gold decor. On the occasional tables in the window embrasures, two huge bowls of snowy white peonies are a picture of serene elegance. On the centre small table, exquisite yellow carnations carry out the gold motif, and over the Adams fireplace a bowl of pastel pink spirea is a lovely note.

On pedestals on either side of the drawing-room door are two enormous bowls holding a melange of lovely blooms—large pink peonies, blue delphinium, pink and blue lupin, yellow and white antirrhinum, rose pithrum and blue and yellow iris combine in delicate harmony.

AT SUPPER PARTY

For last night's supper party, when Their Majesties were entertained "en famille" by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Hamber, the supper table was centred with yellow and blue iris, sweet peas, South African daisies and tall green candles in silver candelabra. Others present included members of the Royal entourage, Premier and Mrs. T. D. Pattullo, and several of the Lieutenant-Governor's aides.

Tonight, the dinner table will be arranged with exquisite Token roses of a peach-pink shade, in great silver bowls, with ivory tapers in silver candelabra.

ensemble of blue-grey print patterned in chateaux, with a boater hat of pinky-beige straw.

Mrs. J. R. Kingham chose a redingote frock of turquoise blue crepe, with hat, shoes and accessories in cranberry tone; Mrs. Maurice W. Turner's redingote was of navy blue over powder blue crepe, with smart navy blue hat.

Mrs. G. C. Jones wore a Hattie Carnegie model, a pink and black print frock, with pink hat and pink gloves.

Shandley's suit was of pearl grey crepe, her hat of navy blue trimmed with delphinium blue, and her accessories of navy blue. Mrs. Henry Hall wore a tailored suit of blue and white silk print, with touches of chateaux, and a blue hat with a water-lily trim.

Mrs. J. W. Spencer's two-piece suit was of French grey crepe, with a flared skirt, the coat having a flared peplum and a sleeve self-embroidered in a trailing leaf pattern.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gets Gowns Ready for Royal Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt gave newspapermen a preview today of a sheer, azure blue dress she will wear June 8 when she meets King George and Queen Elizabeth at Washington's Union Station.

The material, presented to the First Lady by British wool growers as a complement to a similar gift to Queen Elizabeth by American wool growers, was made into the dress by Clare Potter of New York, an American designer.

The simple frock has a white bow at the V-neck, a collar and cuff bound in white pique, and elbow-length sleeves. It is fitted at the waist with a belt of the same material and has a slightly flared gored skirt.

Asked at her press conference how many inches it was from the floor, Mrs. Roosevelt inquired from her questioner what length dresses were being worn now and added that she could not say.

To another questioner who wanted to know if she was beginning to be excited about the approaching visit of the Royal Couple, Mrs. Roosevelt replied that she thought she was an awfully calm person and therefore was not excited.

She disclosed that she personally had sought out various Works Progress Administration guide books in which the King and the Queen might be interested.

Displaying several volumes to be placed in the Royal Couple's rooms, she said she thought one entitled "Washington City and Capitol" would show them how much there is to know about this city, even if they did not have time to read its many pages. Others she included were "New York's Panorama" and "Duchess County" (describing the Hyde Park neighborhood).

Mrs. Roosevelt said Kate Smith, the singer, would represent radio artists on the White House musical program to be given for Their Majesties.

Another performer will be Allan Lomax, singer of cowboy songs. Lomax is the son of John A. Lomax, of the Library of Congress, who has made a collection of cowboy songs.

OAKLANDS Y.P.S.

The fortnightly meeting of Oakland's Y.P.S. was held Friday night last with Group III, under the direction of T. Sawyer in charge. Speakers were L. Smith and I. Hill, who chose as their subject, "Kings and Queens." B. Sawyer, E. Simmers and I. Chisholm entertained with a vocal trio which was followed by a selection sung by Group III choir.

The Junior W.A. of St. Saviours will hold a silver tea and home cooking stall in the Parish Hall on Saturday, June 3, from 3 to 6.

Frustration Drives Youth From Farms

Says President of Federated Women's Institutes

MONTREAL (CP) — Young people are driven from their farm home by a sense of frustration rather than lured by the bright lights and entertainment of cities, in the opinion of Mrs. Herbert MacGregor of Penticton, B.C.

President of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, Mrs. MacGregor said in an interview yesterday young people felt there was no chance for them on the farm, and that as long as they remained there they would have to put up with being treated as children, without economic independence.

The way to remedy this situation, she suggested, was for parents to recognize the rights of their sons and daughters to payment for their work.

Parents also should realize the need of their children to own farm animals or a plot of ground which would be theirs exclusively. Mrs. MacGregor will attend the triennial convention of the Associated Country Women of the World, opening in London at the end of the month.

Toronto Alumni Plan Big Reunion

TORONTO—Largest and most brilliant social gathering of the college year at the University of Toronto will be the annual reunion dinner and graduation ball, June 9, at Hart House, to celebrate the days of the Arts graduation. Graduates and their friends are coming from all parts of Canada and the United States to this event, under the University College Alumni Association.

Dinner will be served in the Great Hall, followed by a reception by President and Mrs. Cody. Thereafter there will be class reunions and dancing.

President and Mrs. Cody will be the guests of honor, in recognition of the remarkable contribution that Dr. Cody has made to the welfare of the university, and through it to the whole Dominion. The dinner has been arranged to mark the 50th anniversary of his graduation from the University of Toronto.

The dinner will also be honored by the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and Mrs. Matthews and Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway and chancellor of McGill University, who will voice the appreciation of the graduates to Dr. Cody.

Members of the president's year, 1889, and all graduates of more than 50 years will be introduced at the dinner as guests of honor.

There will be music in the Big Gymnasium, Debates Room, Reading Room, South Common Room and Music Room, and mid-night supper in the Great Hall and the Graduates' Dining Room.

There will be special class reunions of the Fours and Nines, the classes of '89, '99, '09 and '14 already having plans made. Mr. Gibson, 43 St. George Street, Toronto, is in charge of these special arrangements, under the general convener'ship of E. A. Macdonald, Hart House, president of the association.

QUEEN'S DRESSES SPOTLESS ON TOUR

VANCOUVER—As the Royal tour across Canada nears its half-way mark in Victoria, the outstanding fact that has been made apparent to the millions who have greeted them as well as those who are travelling as members of the tour party is that the King and Queen are two exceedingly charming people who like their food simple and because of their Royal office, must have their service formal.

At official dinners and luncheons, it is the Queen who takes the first steps towards bringing the functions to a close. She usually signals to him by picking up her purse or her gloves which rest in the vicinity of her bread and butter plate, or by tossing her napkin on the table. The King then indicates the function is over by rising and leaving with the Queen.

At the luncheons and dinners the King and Queen are very much at ease. They eat very lightly of simple food, passing up fancy and exotic dishes. They have their own sherry and whisky brought from the Royal cellars in London, and which is served to them by their own servants from a cellophane set up behind their tables.

All during the tour so far the Queen's gowns have been as fresh as spring flowers. Her appearance has been one of complete fastidiousness. Only at Kingston were Her Majesty's white gloves definitely off-white, but she doubtless treasures the marks that ruined their whiteness. Their spotless appearance was marred when hundreds of war veterans clasped her friendly hands.

SHEDIAK, N.B.—Presented by the British government to Capt. William Milne, who outwitted and captured a French prize crew placed aboard the vessel Marguerite during the Napoleonic wars, a gold watch has been bequeathed to Fort Beauséjour Museum by the captain's grandson, the late Capt. William James Milne.

Weddings

DE FOE-SCHROEDER

Rev. Norman J. Crees officiated at the marriage of Thelma Pretoria, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Schroeder, 1619 Hollywood Crescent, and Mr. William De Foe, second son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Anthony De Foe, Castlegar, B.C., which took place in "airfield United Church at 8 last evening.

Miss Isabelle Pike played the wedding marches, and, as the register was being signed, Miss Eleanor Schroeder sang "I Love Thee," accompanied by Mrs. Nelson Brown, both being cousins of the bride.

The ceremony was performed beneath an arch decorated with pink may, white viburnum and trailing wisteria, the guest pews being marked by rhododendron blossoms tied with silver bows. The bridegroom's brother-in-law, Mr. Edward Frederiksen, Trail, was best man, and Messrs. Wilfred Schroeder and Alfred "Buzz" Brown, cousins of the bride, were ushers.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a floor-length frock of rose pink georgette with a short-sleeved jacket and a crownless halo of matching mohair trimmed with pale pink streamers and flowers. She carried a shower bouquet of mauve and pink sweet peas and Ophelia roses. Miss Amy Vye, the bridesmaid, wore a similar frock of pale blue georgette and a small matching turban trimmed with a veil and pink flowers. She carried a sheaf of pink snapdragons.

Relatives of the bride and groom were entertained later at their home by Mr. and Mrs. Schroeder, where pin, white and mauve flowers again predominated in the decorations. Mrs. Schroeder welcomed the guests in a floor-length gown of fuchsia lace and a black hat trimmed with fuchsia shaded flowers, assisted by Mrs. Frederiksen in a turquois blue silk crepe frock with Japanese accessories, both the costumes being adorned with corsage bouquets of gardenias.

The bride's cake centred the supper table, standing among vases of lily of the valley and pink bebe roses.

After a honeymoon trip by motor on the island, Mr. and Mrs. De Foe will cross to the mainland, en route to Nelson, where they will reside. The bride left in a navy blue outfit with a red fox fur.

Diplomat Moves To Repair Wife's Royal Visit Break

Lindsay Meets Press As Washington Awaits King and Queen

News Writers Piqued

WASHINGTON—British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay, although he "can't pretend to enjoy this sort of thing," received the press in a valiant effort to improve the advance publicity on the visit of the King and Queen of England.

Lady Lindsay, the ambassador's wife, had previously been so dreadfully distant in her relations with the ladies of the Washington press corps and the result had been so unfortunate from the publicity standpoint that Sir Ronald felt constrained to straighten things out.

He did a good job of it at a press conference in the British Embassy. Obviously flustered and uncomfortable, the big Scot first explained that he had never before had a press conference and didn't quite know how to go about it.

LADIES AND CAMERAMEN

"My, I didn't know there'd be photographers," he said as the flashlight bulbs started popping. Then, turning to the reporters: "And I didn't know there'd be ladies."

Seizing upon a question about the purposes of the Royal Visit, Sir Ronald explained that the tour of Their Majesties, as originally planned, was confined to the Dominion of Canada.

"Oh, for goodness sake, stop," he pleaded in an aside to the photographers.

Once the Canadian trip was settled upon, he continued, it was "the most natural thing in the world for the King and Queen to consent to a call on the President of the United States."

While this call has no political significance, he emphasized, the King will, of course, try to "improve the ties of friendship" between the United States and the British Empire.

The King will also try while here to have a private talk with Secretary of State Hull, he added.

It was in answering questions about the much criticized social arrangements for the trip that the ambassador was at his best. A woman reporter observed that the King and Queen would have little contact with average Americans.

SO MANY AVERAGE AMERICANS

"There are an awful lot of them," Sir Ronald replied, "and there isn't much time."

He conceded that the point made by the reporter might be "very right," but one "can't defy the laws of nature, you know."

As for the limited invitation list for the garden party at the Embassy in honor of the King and Queen, he explained that it would be "like Heaven—some are taken and some are not."

Photographers will be barred because the Lindsays want to make it a real party with the publicity aspects "not too obtrusive."

There will be no press conference of any sort by the King, he said. When a correspondent suggested that perhaps the King himself might like to hold one, Sir Ronald replied, "I don't think so."

The King will be received by members of Congress in the rotunda of the Capitol, not in either chamber, because the King's reticent about encroaching upon the sanctums of democratic legislative bodies, Sir Ronald said. Because of some historical events a few hundred years ago, the King doesn't visit the parliament of his own country except under extraordinary circumstances.

KING TO SPEAK ONCE

King George will make one speech in the United States, he continued, not a regular one, but just a few remarks in proposing the health of President Roosevelt at the White House state dinner June 8.

Asked how men should behave in the presence of Royalty, he advised that they comport themselves as he does in the presence of the President—"in a simple, respectful manner."

"I make him a bow," Sir Ronald said, "but whether it comes from the waist, I don't quite know." The Queen probably won't do any shopping here but may send her maid for some things, Sir Ronald guessed.

HOSTS ARE AMUSED

The visit of the King and Queen will be the first time in history that a British ruler has set foot on United States soil, but the capital is awaiting their arrival with exceedingly mixed emotions—resentment, apathy and amusement.

Definitely resentful are the numerous social climbers whose herculean efforts to wangle an invitation to the British Embassy's garden party have, almost without exception, resulted in dismal failure.

Politely amused are those members of the nation's official family charged with making arrangements for the visit of their Britannic Majesties and with settling all the problems, both serious and silly, which inevitably accompany such an event.

Numerically, at least, those with skinned noses are in the majority. Social climbers are almost as numerous in Washington as disappointed job seekers, and when Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, airily announced that the invitation list for the Embassy's June 8 garden party would be limited to 1,300—900 of them from Washington—the capital became one huge indignation meeting.

THERE'S A 400, TOO

For it was obvious to the most optimistic invitation seekers that when the "absolute must" of official Washington were counted—the President and the cabinet, the diplomatic corps, the Congress, governors of adjoining states (all with wives)—not much room was left in the select 900.

That 400 outsiders selected with the utmost care by Lady Lindsay from the social registers of cities throughout the country, were being given places on the invitation list only added to the mental anguish of Washington's dwellers.

The wall from disappointed social climbers, however, is a mere whisper compared with the outcries on Capitol Hill from the fifty senators and 365 representatives who have not been invited to meet Their Majesties.

ONLY COMMITTEEMEN

In announcing plans for the garden party, Lady Lindsay explained that only members of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees and chairmen of other standing committees were being invited.

Since all committee chairmen are Democrats, only a handful of Republicans—seven senators and 10 representatives—are included on the Lindsay list, and the howls of anguish from G.O.P. quarters are pitiful to hear. It is pointed out that both Senate Minority Leader Charles McNary and House Minority Leader Joe Martin are ignored, as are a number of other Republican leaders who feel they are entitled to invitations.

Official Washington frankly can be counted upon to put on a good show for the King and Queen just the same.

LADY LINDSAY IN WRONG

Much of the social pique can be blamed on the obviously distraught and beleaguered Lady Lindsay. Harassed on every side by ambitious and importunate social climbers clamoring for invitations, she has dealt as coldly and impersonally with Washington reporters as she would with the Embassy ice man.

What particularly annoys the Washington press corps, however, is the fact that Lady Lindsay coolly refers to her compatriots as "the Amediceans" and to the women correspondents, among whom are some of the outstanding reporters in the capital as "you British editresses."

The wife of the British ambassador—P.C., G.C.M.G., K.C.B. and C.V.O.—probably attained the absolute zero in press relations here last week when she called in 23 "selected" newspaperwomen to explain arrangements for the June 8 garden party and then floored them with the blunt statement that they would not be invited.

Popular Sausages

We may think of a sausage as being made up of "ground-up scraps" but that is not true of most good sausages. The sausage does give the meat packer and butcher a way to use scraps and trimmings, but a great deal of very good meat goes into the casing.

One form of machine used for filling sausages. It is turned by hand.

Bologna, a city in northern Italy, gave its name to a sausage often called "baloney." Bologna sausage is made from pork, veal and beef. The meats are ground up fine, cooked and smoked.

In Scotland a sausage known as "white pudding" is popular. It is made by mixing toasted oatmeal with beef suet. The mixture is minced, and is seasoned with salt and pepper, before being placed in casings and boiled.

France also has a white sausage and it is quite a sausage! White chicken meat is minced and mixed with yolk of eggs, onions, bread crumbs and cream. This is salted and spiced, placed in a case, and boiled in milk and water.

An extremely popular sausage is the frankfurter. It obtained its name from Frankfurt, a city in Germany. It is made of pork and beef, chopped fine and spiced. The wiener or wienerwurst is made in the same way. The Austrian spelling for Vienna is "Wien," and the wiener was named after that city. Both frankfurters and wieners go by such nicknames as "redhots" and "hot dogs."

A good sausage maker smokes the wieners or frankfurters for about 15 minutes, then heats them in hot water for from 12 to 16 minutes.

Some persons boil wieners a few minutes before they take them on picnics. They say this is a good way to make sure the wieners will be well cooked. At wiener roasts, people are likely to be in a hurry to eat the wieners and may not hold them over the fire very long.

Sausages may be stuffed by hand or with hand-turned machines. Packing plants have power machines commonly driven by compressed air, and it is interesting to watch them in use when wieners are made. The chopped-up meat is blown out of a nozzle at a fast rate and goes into casings which may have a length of from four to 20 feet. Later the packing-house workers make links by tying knots every few inches.

SIDE GLANCES

By George Clark

"I'm not saying that you weren't nice to Mother, but you could have taken that pained expression off your face!"

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

DEAR MISS DIX—What can you advise two young people to do who have loved each other ardently and faithfully for the last five years and are now considering marriage? My young man is: Sincere, upright, good-natured, generous, humorous, intelligent and affectionate. His faults are: Quick-tempered, impertinent and jealous to a degree. I am: Pleasure-seeking and freedom-loving, emotional, intolerant, affectionate and also quick-tempered. We will be more than grateful for any suggestions you can give us to make a success of marriage, because we are terribly determined to do so.

Answer: I think that any couple who are really "terribly determined" to make a success of marriage can do so. The reason that so many marriages are failures is because the high contracting parties trust everything to luck. They bring no real intelligence to bear upon their problems and make no sincere effort to adjust themselves to each other.

The rock that most marriages go to pieces on is the daily spat. Silly quarrels about nothing worth while. Each one venting on the other their little spites and disappointments, their resentment that marriage is work and worry and sacrifice instead of a romantic dream.

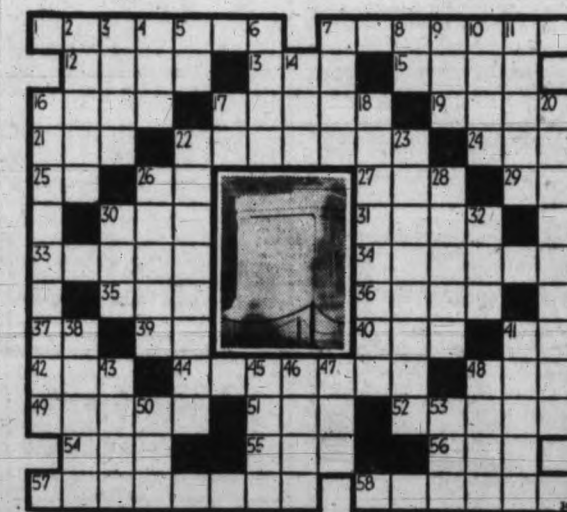

These disagreements are a slow poison that slays love, yet neither one makes any effort to stop them. Every husband knows the things that will set his wife's temper off like a match applied to a fuse; every wife knows the things that irritate her husband, yet instead of avoiding these topics they drag them into the conversation and have a row that leaves them both sore for days.

Neither do husbands and wives try to correct the faults in themselves that their mates object to. Your young man, for instance, is quick-tempered, impertinent and jealous, you say. He knows that if he is to get along with you he must conquer his temper and his jealousy and learn to be diplomatic with you.

If you will live in harmony with him, you must also conquer your temper, emotionalism and intolerance and realize that you must find your pleasure in home and sacrifice your freedom on the domestic altar. You can do all these things if you will, but will you? Self-sacrifice is the price of a happy marriage.

DOROTHY DIX.

Paderewski Departs From U.S.

Believed Genius of Piano, Ill, Will Not Again Tour

NEW YORK (AP)—A lame old man, his shoulders weary with the weight of 78 years, will sail for his home in exile tonight, ill and doubtless disappointed.

And so ends probably the last

North American concert tour of the Polish wizard of the piano, Ignace Jan Paderewski, a living immortal among musicians.

His tour manager, Lawrence Fitzgerald, said today, "I don't think it will be physically possible for him to tour again."

While a throng, enchanted with the legend of his genius, waited restlessly in huge Madison Square Garden last Thursday night, Paderewski himself confronted the inevitable. He told his staff his strength was gone.

He acknowledged what may be the end of his career in spite of a prime incentive to play once again: He needed the money. Having given one fortune of $2,700,000 to the re-creation of Poland as an independent nation and hundreds of thousands more to other philanthropies, he had returned to the land of his first great financial success to refill his purse.

He lives now in a Swiss villa, a voluntary exile from Poland, which he served as a post-war premier, and he also maintains a ranch in California.

Citizens Roar Acclaim At Official Welcome

Their Majesties Received Official B.C. Welcome While Crowds Look On

While cheer after cheer rolled over the lawns of Parliament Square and the Causeway, King George VI and his smiling consort Elizabeth this morning received the official greetings and pledge of loyalty of the people of British Columbia.

In a colorful outdoor ceremony, Their Majesties stood on the main steps of the Parliament Buildings and heard Premier T. D. Pattullo, on behalf of all British Columbians, welcome the King and Queen to this province.

Smilingly, His Majesty received the beautifully-bound address and handed it to an aide, who, in turn, handed the King's reply to His Majesty, who presented it to the Premier.

The Premier and Mrs. Pattullo greeted Their Majesties as they stepped from their car, at the foot of the steps.

Brigadier J. C. Stewart, commanding officer at Work Point, and Lieut.-Colonel Vincent McKenna, officer commanding the 5th B.C. Coast Brigade, which supplied the guard of honor, were presented to His Majesty, who shook hands with them.

INSPECTED GUARD

While the King smartly inspected the guard of honor, Her Majesty stood chatting with His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, Mrs. Hamber and Mrs. Pattullo. Ascending the red-carpeted stone stairway, Their Majesties stood just before the main entrance and there Premier Pattullo introduced his grand-daughter, Miss Anne Collison, who presented Her Majesty with a bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley, her favorite flowers. Small Anne curtsied and Her Majesty shook hands, saying a few words. Mrs. Clifford Collison, the Premier's daughter, and his other grand-daughter, Miss Beth Collison, were then presented.

Grouped about Their Majesties were their personal attendants and all members of the provincial cabinet, with their wives, lined the main entrance.

Great cheers arose from the crowds massed on the lawns after the military band played God Save the King. His Majesty standing at the salute.

KING PLEASED

God Save the King was played again as Their Majesties drove away and the crowds flocked to the driveway for a better view, His Majesty looking happy and pleased and the Queen waving and bowing.

Just before the arrival of the Royal entourage, hundreds of people from Seattle poured from three steamers and stood on the Parliament lawns. They carried United States flags and cheered lustily as the Royal couple arrived and departed.

Returning to the Royal car, Her Majesty walked down the steps first with Premier Pattullo, followed by the King with Mrs. Pattullo. They chatted briefly before Their Majesties entered the car, a scarlet-colored Mounted Policeman arranged their blue motoring robes and the Queen's robe of fur.

The greatest cheer rolled out as Her Majesty stood in the car and waved to the throng.

On either side of the main entrance were groups of disabled returned men, veterans of the Riel Rebellion and Overseas Nursing Sisters, who cheered heartily as the Royal car drove slowly by.

Civil servants and their immediate relations filled every window of the Parliament Buildings. Ships' officers stood on the C.P.R. shed roofs.

The Royal car drove up the east entrance to the buildings, and while Their Majesties were in the Legislative chamber it was turned around and left by the same drive.

First cheers could be heard at the Parliament Buildings as Their Majesties were on Government Street, near Yates. They increased in volume as the Royal car drove over the Causeway and reached Parliament Square.

Police Station Unusually Quiet

No Accidents, Crime Or Fire Calls During Morning

With thousands of visitors in the city from the United States, Vancouver Island points and the Mainland, and extra precautions provided for public protection, the city police this morning experienced the quietest day in years.

There was a busy time organizing traffic on the outside but all that happened inside was a report by telephone that someone had found a lost dog. The report was duly noted and filed on the police blotter. Fire department equipment, placed outside for any emergency, never moved during the morning.

Traffic arrangements were excellent. At every point where Their Majesties stopped for official functions the lines were kept well back and there was plenty of room for every one to see the long route of the procession.

Hundreds used periscopes similar to those used during the Coronation procession in London. The distributor of these reported a booming business.

Persons who invested large sums in erecting grandstand seats for the procession appeared to have suffered losses. Oak Bay was the only centre where they were used to any great extent and in other parts more than half the stands were vacant.

The St. John's Ambulance Brigade, stationed throughout the city and municipalities fully equipped, reported no major accidents or cases of emergency. A few people fainted after waiting for long periods but none suffered seriously.

For hours prior to the arrival of the Royal ship the jovial crowds accepted the wares of camp stool, periscope and refreshment salesmen along the route taken by the Royal party to Government House.

Attired in morning dress, the ladies in afternoon gowns.

On her way from the building the Queen stopped at the foot of the stairs to address Lieutenant-Colonel R. S. Worsley, a member of the guard of returned soldiers in the city employ who lined the entrance to the hall.

"She asked me to which regiment I belonged. I told her the Canadian Engineers," he explained.

IN THE CROWDS

Smartly-uniformed representatives of various ex-servicemen's organizations, bearing the respective banners of their units, stood at attention at the Cenotaph as Their Majesties passed to and from the Parliament Buildings.

Jack Neary, representing the Britannia Branch of the Canadian Legion, was in charge of the group. John Milne represented Imperial Comrades Association; W. C. Clarke, North Saanich veterans; E. A. Aitken, Pro Patria Branch of the Canadian Legion; P. W. Taylor, Sooke Branch of the Canadian Legion; J. Burt Smith, Army and Navy Veterans in Canada; T. Davies, Pro Patria Branch and the president of the Naval Veterans Branch of the Canadian Legion.

Chief Thunderbird, Baptiste Paul of the West Saanich Indian tribe was at the Parliament Buildings in full ceremonial regalia to welcome Their Majesties.

Following the ceremonies at the centre and after the Royal Couple had left, the handsome chief was besieged by tourists and locals with cameras of every size and description. He good-naturedly posed for at least 15 minutes while the camera fiends took shots of him from all angles.

Even though practically every second spectator in the crowd had a camera and planned on taking pictures of Their Majesties as they passed, it was noticed that many of them were completely forgotten when King George and Queen Elizabeth did pass.

So great was the excitement of seeing the Royal Couple that picture taking was forgotten. "And I had such a great chance to get a good picture, too," one spectator was heard to say as the crowds dispersed.

Smart woman, chartreuse green felt hat, black suit, American certainly, talking to a companion outside the Empress Hotel after the crowd had streamed across the lawns from the Legislative Buildings. "She's so soft. Smiles softly, moves softly. Even the way she moves her hand. That's the difference between us and the British. Look at the way they say 'schedule.' Listen to them. 'Schedule' they say. Isn't that lovely? It's soft, just like the Queen."

"Break my back so somebody can hear six words. But it's worth it!" A perspiring workman laboriously pounded the narrow path of new earth under the loudspeaking system at Beacon Hill Park. "That fellow Tisdale has to give the men orders. They're picked up by this here microphone," and he kicked a tiny black rectangular obstacle almost buried in the ground, "and carried over to those loudspeakers you see over there." Here he pointed a calloused finger at

Stand Builders Took a Loss

Spectators Preferred More Active Part in Royal Visit Celebrations

Victorians, like the people in other parts of Canada, today showed they prefer to take more active part in celebrations than watching them from grandstand.

During the course of the Royal procession today the many bleachers erected along the route were very sparsely occupied.

According to reports the same has held true throughout the entire Canadian tour of Their Majesties. Canadians have shown they would rather join the crowds thronging the sidewalks.

In the case of Victoria the long route traveled by Their Majesties no doubt had a lot to do with the bleacher seats being in little demand. Throughout the drive through Victoria, Esquimalt, Saanich and Oak Bay there was ample standing room for every one.

Three municipal bleachers erected in Oak Bay were the exception to the rule. These, along with several private stands, were packed to capacity.

Failure of the citizens to purchase accommodation in the hundreds of bleachers constructed along the route resulted in a considerable financial loss to those responsible for their erection.

Three large horns lying on the ground some distance away. "They're to be mounted on a stand, so everybody will hear the orders. About bust my back getting them lines run under the ground, then pounded flat again. Looks pretty nice, though, don't it?" His brawny chest swelled.

"And it sure is worth it." "Say, you're a reporter, aren't you? I think it'd be a nice thing if you said something in the papers about the people that do all the work." He was a big, hairy chap with round, ruddy face. Name was Courville, chief painter at the barracks. He was loading shovels into a lorry at Beacon Hill Park. "See all that fence? There's 6,000 feet of it. We've been doing it for weeks. The flags we put up yesterday. We were going to put some more up today but they decided they wouldn't on account of the weather. Thought it looked like rain." He picked up a rake. "Isn't the enthusiasm wonderful? People have been jamming in here since 8 this morning. Don't ever seem to get tired. Just sit. And wait. People certainly are excited to see Their King and Queen." He burst into a toothy smile. "So am I!"

Travel All Night To Reach City

Thousands Come From Vancouver Island Points for Royal Visit

Some traveled all night, others started out at the crack of dawn but all had Victoria as their destination. While the majority of this city's residents were sound asleep thousands were traveling from all points of Vancouver Island to the Capital City to take part in the Royal Visit celebrations and see the King and Queen.

From 2 this morning on there was a steady stream of automobiles over the Malahat into the city. One party left Nanaimo at 3 and owing to the heavy traffic did not reach here until 8. Vancouver Island Coach Lines announced their stages had brought down 500 people today in addition to the 1,500 over the week-end. There was also heavy travel by the E. & N.

Two special ferries from Seattle, the Princess Marguerite, which yesterday was used as the Royal yacht to bring Their Majesties to Victoria from Vancouver, and the Princess Kathleen brought 2,000 people. The Princess Alice arrived from Vancouver with close to 300 while the Princess Mary brought in a large crowd from the Gulf Islands.

It was from Port Angeles the big influx was seen. Between them the steamers Olympic and Iroquois landed over 1,000 people from across the Straits. The ferry Kalakala also docked from Seattle with close to 300 American visitors.

Hotel proprietors in general reported full houses. Some of the hostels reported they had a few vacancies, but expected to be completely sold out of accommodation before tonight.

Despite advance fears restaurant owners were having no trouble handling the public. Majority of them reported they had felt a little pressure but with additional staffs had been able to keep the people moving. One well-known eating house has employed a staff of 40, while another has 28 people at work.

by a general alarm to the premises of T. P. Cook and Company, hardware and cabinet manufacturers in Tabernacle Street, which burned for two hours before the flames were extinguished.

The fire spread across the 40-foot wide street to a building occupied by the Waters Printing Company. Because of a danger of walls falling the street remained closed to all traffic. Three water towers were used in fighting the fire.

Among the guests of the city is W. D. Callow, honorary president of the Manx societies of the Pacific coast, delegated as special representative to attend the festivities in honor of Their Majesties.

THE RED CROSS WORKSHOP

Civic Leaders Are Presented

King and Queen Given Great Ovation by Municipal Dignitaries of Greater Victoria

The British Monarchy wore a new mantle of charm, simplicity and dignity for the elected leaders of Greater Victoria today.

In the City Council chamber, decorated with a profusion of blooms, the King and Queen of Canada met city aldermen, reeves of Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt and their wives, greeted them with ready smiles and warm hand clasps and left the municipal dignitaries and the assembled audience of approximately 75 with a deep personal affection for two charming people upon whom the robes of state rest with an easy friendliness.

A roar of cheering swept up the crimson-carpeted stairs as Their Majesties arrived outside the City Hall. The voices of the augmented male choir of the Arion Club swelled in the singing of God Save the King.

Met at the entrance by Mayor Andrew McGavin and Mrs. McGavin, the Royal pair mounted the stairs behind Pipe Major Alex Wallace and Sergeant James Marrs, in their 16th Canadian Scottish uniforms, to the pipe selection "Scotland The Brave."

Apparent nervousness on the part of the assembled crowd dropped from its members as the King and Queen entered, smiling and nodding with the frank pleasure of the occasion. With them came His Honor the Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Hamber with other members of the Royal entourage.

Before the crimson dais, with its canopy of royal purple and gold, Their Majesties stood easily.

FRIENDLY PRESENTATIONS Presented by Mayor Andrew McGavin, the aldermen, reeves and their wives bowed and curtsied to the King and Queen in order, each receiving a smile and handclasp from the young, tanned monarch in the informal dress of an Admiral of the Fleet and from his charming consort.

The Queen was gown in orchid, with a long skirt, short bolero and short sleeves. Her gown was braided up the skirt and bodice with silk braid of the same shade. She wore a large, fine straw hat, the largest of her tour to date, in an orchid shade and off-the-face model. Orchid gloves and shoes, a corsage of orchids and natural blue fox stole completed her ensemble.

Those presented and the order in which they met Their Majesties were: Alderman and Mrs. R.

A. C. Dewar, Alderman and Mrs. Archie Wills, Alderman and Mrs. Edward Williams, Alderman and Mrs. S. H. Okell, Alderman and Mrs. W. L. Morgan, Alderman and Mrs. J. A. Worthington, Alderman and Mrs. B. J. Gadsden, Alderman and Mrs. W. H. Davies, Alderman and Mrs. D. D. McTavish, Alderman T. W. Hawkins, Reeve and Mrs. A. G. Lambrick, Saanich, Reeve and Mrs. R. R. Taylor, Oak Bay, Reeve and Mrs. Alex Lockley, Esquimalt; M. F. Hunter, City clerk, and John Baxter, mayor's secretary.

SPOKE TO REEVE The Queen detained Reeve Taylor for a few quietly-spoken words as he was presented.

At the completion of the presentations Mayor McGavin handed to His Majesty the illuminated address of welcome and loyalty from the citizens of Victoria, saying: "It is my honor to present to Your Majesty the loyal and affectionate greetings of the citizens of Victoria."

The King received the address smiling and turned to an aide, receiving from him a picture of the Royal Family which he presented to the Mayor.

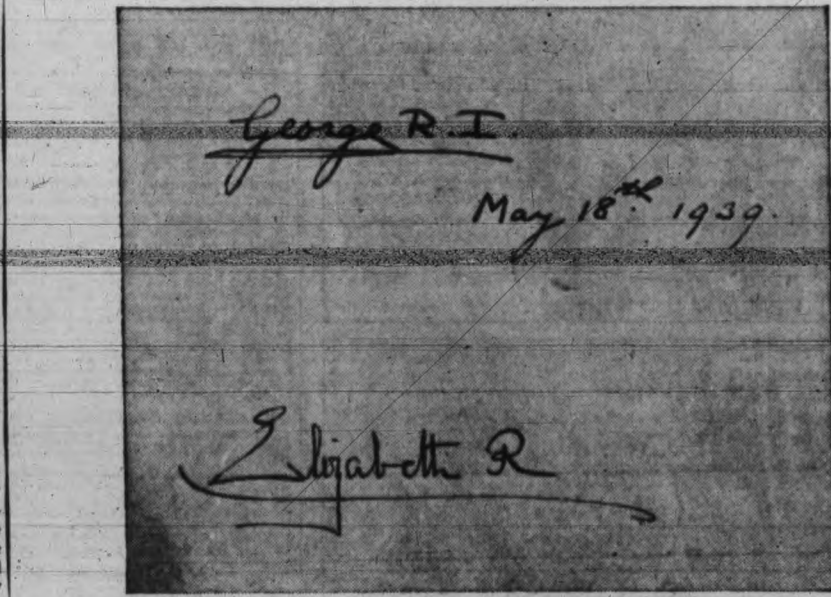

As the mayor asked Their Majesties to honor the city by signing the visitors' book, Mrs. McGavin presented to the Queen a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley, tied with the Lyon tartan, the home tartan of Her Majesty. "From the women of the City of Victoria, with their love and homage."

Their Majesties signed the visitors' book, suitably inscribed in gold and red for the occasion, on the page opposite that signed by U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt and members of his family party here on September 30, 1937.

SPONTANEOUS CHEERING Applause which broke out spontaneously as the Royal Party entered the chamber, sprang up again. Unrehearsed cheers swelled in the Council Chamber to the King and Queen.

They withdrew with their pipe escort to the strains of "The Brown-haired Maiden." They passed through the artistically-hung corridors and stairs to the street where cheers again broke forth. The massed choir joined singing O Canada and the party drove towards the Parliament Buildings.

The mayor, reeves and aldermen attending the function were

SIGNED BY ROYALTY—The signatures of King George and Queen Elizabeth as they have inscribed them on the rolls of the various municipalities across Canada from Quebec to Victoria.

Earlier the conference had heard criticism of Prime Minister

Spectacular Welcome
For Their Majesties

Gracious Royal Couple Receive Thunderous Greeting From Victorians

Victoria welcomed King George and Queen Elizabeth last night in a blaze of lights.

Beacon fires which flared to the sky when the Royal yacht Princess Marguerite and its destroyer escort was sighted off
Ten Mile Point gave place in the Inner Harbor to the soft lights of the majestic buildings facing the docks.

Officials accompanying the Royal Party said the arrival of Their Majesties at the most westerly point of their Canadian tour was the most spectacular sight of all. And it was a truly British welcome that must have gladdened Their Majesties' hearts.

Lined-in tens of thousands along the whole of the city's ten-mile waterfront, and along the entire route from the C.P.R. dock to Government House, Victoria welcomed the Royal couple with cheers, whistles, sirens and shouts. A gentle rain that fell for a few minutes soon after the arrival in no way dampened the spirits of the crowds. Wave on wave of cheers followed the Royal car as it bore Their Majesties at a good speed to the Lieutenant-Governor's residence where they spent their first night away from the Royal train since leaving Banff.

The arrival of Their Majesties in Victoria was their thirteenth day on Canadian soil and their first opportunity to enjoy somewhat of a rest from official ceremonies before they started the journey homeward and their visit to the United States.

The Princess Marguerite, with two destroyers ahead and two astern in single line, two mine-sweepers which went out from the naval base at Esquimalt, and three seaplanes circling overhead, made a brave sight as they traveled up the straits at high speed. A fleet of private yachts greeted them at Ten Mile Point as the beacon fires shot skyward.

WATERFRONT WELCOME

Blares from thousands of automobile horns greeted the Royal yacht as she steamed along the waterfront. As the flotilla rounded Clover Point a series of magnesium bombs were let off, all the way to the Inner Harbor.
The destroyer escort went into the Esquimalt naval base as the Marguerite proceeded majestically into the harbor.

The boat's whistle blew when she was five minutes away from the dock and a huge roar went up from the crowd of 10,000 which had waited for two hours along the causeway. One hundred picked men from the Royal Canadian Navy base, under Lieut. E. P. Tis-dall, marched smartly into position on Belleville Street, facing the dock to form the guard of honor.
Behind them, on Menzies
Street was the naval band.

As the Royal yacht poked her nose round the pier there was a deafening roar of sirens, boat whistles, and cheers from the crowd. The Royal standard flew at her masthead.

On the dot at 9 the vessel was tied up at the dock. Lieutenant-Governor E. W. and Mrs. Hamber, the Premier and Mrs. Pattullo and Mayor and Mrs. McGavin walked out of the C.P.R. ticket office to board the boat, where they were presented to Their Majesties.

Meanwhile the maroon-colored Royal car, with the Royal standard furled in front, was drawn up beside the platform.

Commissioner S. T. Wood of the R.C.M.P. and Chief Constable Canning of Scotland Yard appeared to pilot the procession, with Commissioner T. W. S. Parsons of the B.C. Police.

As the Royal standard was lowered from the ship's flagstaff and unfurled on the car, the crowd saw that Their Majesties were leaving the vessel.

FIRST GLIMPSE

There was a tense moment.
Then, far down the covered gangway, someone in the crowd caught the first glimpse of Their Majesties.

A great roar swept the waiting throngs. There was a slight lull, then a woman's shrill voice was heard:
"There's the King, God Bless Him."

His Majesty appeared at the end of the gangway, attired in the undress uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet. He walked on the left, with Her Majesty the Queen on his right. Once again the crowd broke into cheers.

Behind them were the Lieut-Governor and Mrs. Hamber, the Premier and Mrs. Pattullo, the Mayor and Mrs. McGavin, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and other officials of the welcoming party.

The Guard of Honor sloped arms.

Another mighty cheer went up from the crowd and someone from the rear started a spontaneous "Hip, Hip, Hooray."

It died down as the band struck up God Save the King. The King stood, saluting as the throng joined in singing the national anthem.

Capt. V. G. Brodeur, senior naval officer, stepped forward and was presented to His Majesty by the Lieutenant-Governor.

INSPECTS THE GUARD

Accompanied by Lieut. Tisdall the King inspected the Guard of Honor, marching briskly down the double line of men who stood like statues. A few drops of rain that fell when the ship arrived lifted for this moment.

The Queen, meanwhile, stood chatting with Mrs. Pattullo and Mrs. Hamber. She turned to smile at newsmen and photographers gathered on the depot platform. It was the same gracious gesture with which she waved to the throngs along the route, which had been swelled by thousands who raced from the waterfront to witness the arrival.

The King returned to the platform and talked for a few seconds to Capt. Brodeur. He helped the Queen into the car, where she donned a fur robe.

As the Royal car started off, with Lieut-Col. the Hon. Piers Leigh in the front seat beside the driver, the crowd roared its approval again, almost drowning out the strains of God Save the King played by the naval band.

PROCESSION STARTS

Through cheering throngs they sped to Government House for the night. A gentle rain fell as they started away from the dock but the hood of the Royal car remained down and Their Majesties acknowledged the plaudits of the throngs. Cars carrying the other officials of the Royal Party and dignitaries followed the Royal car, although at a considerable distance behind the motorcycle escort of scarlet-coated P.C.L.I. riders.

In the second car, behind a squad of R.C.M.P. officers, were the Lieutenant-Governor, Mrs.
Hamber, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Lady Katherine Seymour, Lady-in-waiting to the Queen. Following them were the Premier and Mrs. Pattullo, A. E.
Lasselles, the King's acting private secretary and Lady Nurburnholme, Lady-in-waiting.

In the next car was Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence, Lieut-Col. H. M. Urquhart
A.D.C. to the King and A. D. P.
Henney, chief secretary to the Prime Minister.

The scene around the causeway while the vast throng waited for Their Majesties was comparable to a page from a fairytale book.

It was shortly after supper time when the first people began lining the barricades behind the smart uniforms of navy and militia that lined the route. The C.P.R. docks were cleared of boats.

The naval band marched into position shortly after 8, then the Princess Pats motorcycle escort arrived to add color to the scene.
The Post Office was already lit, and at 8.20 the lights on the Parliament Buildings and the Empress Hotel went up. A few minutes later the fountain on the Parliament Buildings lawns began to play in colored lights. The soft glow spread over the throng as darkness fell.

First of the top-hatted digni-taries to arrive at the dock was Mayor McGavin, accompanied by Mrs. McGavin and his secretary, John Baxter.

There followed the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Hamber, with aides-de-camp Col. J. R. Kingham and Col. Vincent McKenna. Premier and Mrs. Pattullo arrived to complete the welcoming party.

Sharp on time at 8.40 the pilot boat Princess Adelaide drew up at the Inner dock. The crowd, impatient yet friendly, cheered the arrival of the vessel which bore 100 newspapermen and cameramen accompanying the Royal Party.

It was only a short time after the pilot boat docked that the 21-gun Royal salute began to thunder out from Work Point Barracks, fired by the Royal Canadian Artillery under Lieut. D. S.
Gilles announcing the arrival of the Royal Party.

At the same instant the naval guard of honor moved forward into position and was warmly clapped for their smart step.

CROWDS GATHER

Two and three hours before the scheduled arrival of Their Majesties, people who wished to get curb vantage points started to congregate in the choice area on Belleville Street, in front of the Parliament Buildings. By 7.30 every available front-line spot was captured. By 8.30 there was a heavy jam of eight and 10 deep in places, right from the C.P.R. docks up to the end of Belleville Street north.

People who failed to get decent viewing spots crowded against the entire length of the granite

'Boy Friend'

Jane Withers Goes Romantic in Her Madcap Way

It must be awful to have a
"crush" when you're busy dodging bullets, but that's the madcap Withers way! It makes for exciting, madcap entertainment in "Boy Friend." Jane Withers' newest 20th Century-Fox comedy, which opens today at the Dominion Theatre.

The "Boy Friend" is what Jane's latest is about. The Hollywood hoyden has her first
"crush"—young George Ernest, erstwhile Roger of the Jones Family. When you're Jane's beau you have to be able to go places and do things, as poor George finds out.

"What a girl friend for a boy friend to have!" he is moved to exclaim. "Give me a nice, quiet war!"

Arlene Whelan, Richard Bond,
Douglas Fowley, Warren Hymer,
Robert Kellard and Minor Watson are included in the cast of the film, which was directed by James Tinling with John Stone associate producer.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Real stardom is the next step in the sudden career of pretty Marjorie Weaver, thanks to her performance opposite Tony Martin in the Ritz Brothers' 20th Century-Fox comedy, "Kentucky Moonshine," currently at the Columbia Theatre. Darryl F. Zannuck was in charge of the production.

OAK BAY THEATRE

"Grand Illusion," starring Eric von Stroheim, is the current feature at the Oak Bay Theatre all this week, with both matinee and evening performances. Directed by Jean Renoir, this picture was voted as the "best film of the year produced in any country" by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. It is a prison camp story of the war, based on the director's own experiences.

Mr. Grew, tall and distinguished, smiled when newspapermen asked his opinion of present troubles between China and Japan. Like all diplomats, he said he had no opinions for the public.

In Washington he will report to the Secretary of State and President Roosevelt. He and Mrs. Grew will be in the capital when King George and Queen Elizabeth are there early in June.
